Forty Solons Hold Draft Extension Fate

SPLIT OF PARTY LINES EXPECTED IN HOUSE VOTE

Leaders Of Both Groups Polling Members About Their Decisions

CONTEST BITTER ONE

Democratic Leaders Confer About Concessions That Might Be Made

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Fate of the administration's request for longer service for draftees and other soldiers lies in the minds of 40 undecided members of the House, checkups by leaders of both parties disclosed today.

A last-minute canvass on what has become one of the most bitter struggles of the session showed party heads that they can expect about 190 certain votes for the bill and 180 sure ones against it.

This leaves 40 in doubt to give a total roll of 410 out of a membership of 435—an unusually high vote expectancy.

Democratic whips, who have been keeping a close check on their colleagues in the controversial matter, said that a survey made since the Senate approved the extension bill showed that 44 House Democrats definitely will oppose it, 180 will vote for it, and 30 are still in doubt.

Republicans said that 136 of their members will oppose the extension, 10 will vote for it, and 10 are undecided.

Week End Rest Taken

The polls came as the House, with feeling running high on both sides, rested over the week end and prepared to start actual voting on amendments to the bill early next week.

As the Senate passed it, the measure provides for 18 months more service for draftees, national guardsmen, and regular personnel, while the House committee is backing its recommendation for an unlimited extension of service.

Faced with what they openly admit is going to be "a tough, close struggle," House Democratic leaders were conferring over concessions they may make in last minute efforts to pick up votes.

While they are waiting for further crystallization of opinion, there were strong indications the leadership may agree to an amendment to provide a one-year limitation on extra service.

South for Measure

Lineup on the measure is both sectional and partisan. The most solid bloc is that made up of Democrats from the intervention-minded south, who virtually to a man will support the bill in any form.

The Republicans, on the other hand, are almost solidly opposed to it with the exception of scattered defections, mainly from the

Will Nazis Get African Bases?

A Soviet report and reports from Washington, credited to informed sources, indicate that German pressure on the Vichy regime may force the Vichy government to turn over to German use the French bases at Algiers, Casablanca and Dakar in North and West Africa, indicated on above map. Most of French West Africa, with the exception of Dakar, is under the control of General Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces, but the United States has feared that Germany might use Dakar as a possible jumping-off point for invasion of South America.

CIO Workers Ask U.S. To Take Kearny Yards

KEARNY, N. J., Aug. 9.—The U. S. government today had before it a request of 17,000 CIO shipbuilding strikers who walked out of their jobs at the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Thursday to take over the yards and "operate them in the interests of National Defense."

The request was contained in a statement issued by Peter Flynn, vice-president of Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, which said:

"Local 16 calls on the United States government to take over the Federal shipbuilding yards and operate them in the interests of National Defense."

ACTRESS SAFE AFTER HER CAR GOES OVER BANK

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 9.—Film Star Martha Raye narrowly escaped death or serious injuries late last night when her automobile plunged off a canyon road and hurled down a 150-foot embankment, police disclosed today.

X-rays showed Miss Raye suffered no broken bones. Neal Lang, the actress' husband, said she received a sprained ankle, but will be able to report at her studio for work on Monday.

Investigating officers said the actress was en route to her mother's home when she swerved to avoid an oncoming car on a curve and plunged off the road. Miss Raye was alone in the machine.

LOVE'S FUNNY THING; FEW DRINKS LEAD TO ASSAULT WITH HAMMER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Magistrate Charles Solomon believed today he had heard just about everything.

Elsie Cortez, 28-year-old model, appeared before the magistrate and sought to withdraw a felonious assault charge against Charles Henry, 33.

"I love him, your honor," she said, "and I know that he didn't mean to hit me with the hammer. He was mad at me, that's the truth."

The puzzled judge asked how Henry had got the hammer.

"He took it from me," she replied. "I got mad while we were having a few drinks and started breaking up his furniture. He hit me on the back of the head, but he didn't mean it."

They told the judge they were thinking of being married. As the couple walked out, pending a grand jury hearing of Henry on August 14, the magistrate said:

"Love is very strange."

BAROMETER HINTS RAIN MAY FALL IN COUNTY

A four point drop in the barometer reading Saturday brought a prediction from the weatherman Saturday night or Sunday may bring showers.

Temperatures Saturday were climbing back up into the nineties after reaching a high Friday of 96 degrees. Low Saturday was 70.

Stage of the Scioto River Saturday was 2.37 feet, the lowest this season.

SENATE TO VOTE BIG INCREASE IN HOUSE TAX ACT

Chairman George Declares Solons Considering Several Plans

THREE BILLIONS NEEDED

Change In Income Base, Boost In Surtax Bracket Likely

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Sen. George (D) Ga., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, predicted today that it will comply with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's request to increase the yield of the House-passed tax bill to at least $3,500,000,000.

George said that although a general program to form the basis for the proposed increase is yet to be worked out it will probably be brought about through broadening the income tax base, increasing the surtax bracket and revising or readjusting other levies.

"We will go up to $3,500,000,000 and perhaps a little bit beyond that figure if it can be done while still preserving the economic system," George said.

"I think," he added, "that some program will be worked out that will carry out in principle at least most of the recommendations of the secretary of the treasury, although there will probably be some differences of opinion."

Fought in Committee

George said however that he does not favor the treasury recommendations to increase the five percent surtax bracket approved by the House to 11 percent, and predicted that it will meet strong opposition in the committee.

"I think that the increase in the surtax bracket to 11 percent would be exceedingly high," George said, "and it seems questionable to me that the committee would go that far."

The Georgia senator said that the committee would accept President Roosevelt's proposal that new exemptions in the

FUTURE ACTIONS BY JAPS DECIDE COURSE OF U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The United States government, it was learned today, plans strict enforcement of the present drastic economic sanctions against Japan as long as there is reason to believe the Nippon Empire contemplates further aggressive action in the Far East, especially against Thailand.

No licenses are being granted by the government to facilitate the importation of Japanese silk into this country, and it is understood that few, if any, are likely to be granted unless there is a lessening of tension in the Pacific.

If Japan gives evidence of abandoning what are believed to be its designs on Thailand, and refrains from further aggressive action in the Pacific, this government, informed quarters indicated, will be willing to consider relaxation of the present economic sanctions and a gradual resumption of "peace-time" trade with the Nippon Empire.

Although trade between the United States and Japan remains virtually at a standstill, the American government has not yet clamped down a complete economic embargo. Shipment of crude petroleum products to Japan still is permitted on a pre-war quota basis and the Japanese are being granted liberal access to Philippine products.

F. B. I. STUDYING BIG INCREASE IN BLAST ON SHIP FILLED WITH OIL

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—Half-submerged, the huge oil tanker, M. V. Transiter, smoldered in the River Rouge today as Federal Bureau of Investigation agents pressed a probe of possible sabotage in the explosion which burned the vessel and reportedly killed two persons, one the wife of the captain.

The Transiter, loaded with 700,000 gallons of high test gasoline destined for Canadian stations of the Austin Oil Company, exploded three-quarters of a mile from the Ford Motor Company's Rouge plant last night.

The crewless ship drifted menacingly downstream, tall flames threatening gasoline tanks along the river banks. It moved under drawbridges and bumped against docks of the American Chemical Co. where flames destroyed fences and several sheds.

Powerful streams of water from fire tugs finally forced the boat into shallow water where it grounded.

The ship is owned by the Transist Tankers Terminal Ltd., of Montreal.

Believed dead were Mrs. Alda Trembley, 43, of Murray Bay, Que., wife of Captain Rodolphe Trembley, and Roger Frechette, 20-year-old deck hand from Drummondville, Que. Fifteen other persons saved themselves by leaping from the flaming ship and swimming to shore.

Wayne County Prosecutor William E. Dowling said several crew members believed the blast was caused by the hot sun increasing pressure inside the vessel's gas tanks.

The increase "is directly attributable to the larger quantities of leather needed to make larger shoes," an OPM spokesman said.

It appears that shoe firms have been doing some checking, too, and have discovered that the feet of soldiers and seafarers in America's 1941 army average a size larger than they did when the doughboys marched in 1918.

They tell you that "medium" size today is 10, whereas in 1918 it was nine.

OPM officials admit that most of the shoes in the 1,000,008 order were 10s. An increase of two cents per pair boosts the bill on the shipment $20,000.

ENGINEER, FORMERLY OF CITY, DIES IN DETROIT

Wilson S. Kinnear, 77, a resident of Circleville many years ago, died Friday in Detroit after a long illness.

Mr. Kinnear was chief engineer of the Michigan Central Railroad in 1910 and was in charge of construction of the railroad's tunnel under the Detroit River.

Authorities investigated the suicide of Charles Flickinger, 13, on a farm south of Canfield. The boy was found hanging in a barn.

RUSSIANS SAY MAJOR GERMAN OBJECTIVES HIT

But Nazi Capital Declares Attackers Turned Back By Defenders

HEAVY FIGHTING GOES ON

Moscow Parodies Claims Of Foes Concerning Big Advantages

MOSCOW, Aug. 9.—While fierce fighting raged along the entire front, Red air force bombers attacked Berlin for the second time in succession last night and early today.

An official communique stated:

"Fighting continued last night in the directions of Kexholm, Smolensk, Korosten, Byelaya-Tserkov and in the Estonian sector."

Information in Moscow stated the Russian bombers bombed military objectives in the vicinity of the German capital.

(Editor's Note: An official Berlin announcement said "enemy" planes raided northwestern and northern Germany and that a few headed for Berlin, but were forced to turn back by heavy anti-aircraft fire. The German statement said no damage was caused and that four raiders were shot down.)

(A German radio broadcast picked up in London said the nationality of the planes that attacked Berlin was not known.)

A previous Russian announcement stated Soviet planes raided Berlin Thursday night, dropping a number of incendiary bombs on the city and all returning safely to their bases.

According to the Moscow radio, military targets in several Berlin districts were attacked by the Russian bombers and a number of fires and explosions were observed.

Type Of Plane Named

(The London Daily Express reported from Stockholm that Russian 4-motored TB bombers from bases on the Baltic Oesel and Dagoo Islands raided Berlin, heavily damaging industrial districts.

The Daily Mail, in a Stockholm dispatch, said it was understood the Russian pilots and bombardiers were supplied with copies of RAF photographs of Berlin's principal military objectives.)

Meanwhile, the Russian high command communique told of fierce fighting on the fronts covering Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev. It said:

"Our troops fought the enemy

VITAL QUESTIONS BEING TALKED BY FRENCH CABINET

VICHY, Aug. 9.—Momentous decisions affecting France's African colonial empire and the extent of the Vichy government's collaboration with Germany today were expected within a few hours as the cabinet prepared to meet with Marshal Henri Philippe Petain.

Admiral Jean Darlan, vice-premier and considered a proponent of closer collaboration, was back in Vichy after a visit to Paris where he held a series of talks with German authorities.

From North Africa came General Maxime Weygand, military governor of France's colonies on the southern continent. Flying up from Africa yesterday, he rushed to a hurried conference with Marshal Petain.

Earlier this week, Admiral Darlan, by official decree, was placed in complete charge of African colonial policy. Heretofore, Gen.

European Bulletins

BERLIN — German authorities claimed today that the drydock at Alexandria, British Mediterranean naval base, was heavily damaged by several large bombs in Thursday night's Luftwaffe raid and will be out of action for some time. Another bomb was said to have "critically damaged" a destroyer.

LONDON — British military authorities declared today they had received no confirmation of Germany's latest claims of victory in the Ukraine. It was admitted, however, that the Nazi advance toward Odessa is continuing and that the Germans probably have reached a point within 70 miles of Nikolaev.

LONDON — Reuters (British) news agency today quoted Jerusalem and Moscow reports that an open revolt was raging in Yugoslavia. Resistance of the Serbs in Yugoslavia, Reuters said, is increasing in violence every day, and occupation authorities are masters only of the larger towns.

SAN FRANCISCO — Overseas telephone communications between the Pacific Coast and Japan remained free and uninterrupted today despite a Nazi radio report that phone communication had been severed. Officials of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company reported "calls are being put through" without hindrance and that they had received no intimation that the service will be curtailed or cut off.

BERLIN — The high command announced today that German planes during the night raided ports and airdromes at the eastern and southern British coasts, causing fires and explosions. The communique added four enemy raiders were shot down over German territory during the night.

LONDON — British military authorities said today that Japan during the last few weeks has sent 100,000 more troops into Manchukuo, reinforcing the 250,000 originally stationed there.

30 FARMERS PROTESTING AAA WHEAT ALLOTMENTS

Thirty farmers in Pickaway County, protesting their 1941 wheat allotments, have submitted their cases to the Appeals board, county AAA officials said Saturday.

Twenty of the cases already have been heard by the board and ten remain to be considered. All appeals were raised by farmers who felt their wheat allotments should be larger than the acreage assigned them by the AAA.

Members of the board include Fred Orr, Chillicothe, chairman; Marvin Steele, Washington Township and Charles D. Hosler, Monroe Township.

Toledo Strong, Menaces Foes In Association

Milwaukee Blasted By Hens, 17 To 3; Red Bird Lead Cut Down By Millers

Don't look now, you leaders in the American Association, but you're being followed—and closely.

Although still down in the lower bracket, the hottest team in the loop today is the Toledo outfit.

The Mudhens last night exploded 18 hits in the faces of three alleged pitchers for hapless, cellar-dwelling Milwaukee, and pranced off with a 17 to 3 victory—their eighth in their last ten games. They played air-tight ball afield. And Johnny Marcum, their stellar hurler, did a sweet job of scattering seven bingles, as well as poling out three for five, including a double, himself.

JERRY M WINS HEAT, CUTS LEG

Moore's Horse Removed From Clinton County Racing Event

Jerry M, John D. Moore's great pacer, was withdrawn from the three-year-old pace event at the Clinton County Fair Friday afternoon when he threw a shoe and suffered a leg cut.

The horse had won the first heat, in which he received his injury.

Scott's Emilee, filly who finished second to Jerry M in the first heat, went on to win the race, taking the next two heats.

Many Circleville racing fans were in the stands.

10 MARKSMEN HIT PERFECT SCORES IN SKEET SHOOT

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—Ten marksmen with perfect scores for their first 100 targets led the way today in the 250-target world's skeet shooting championships. A record-breaking field of more than 300 gunners was entered in the event.

The ten perfect gunners were Paul Slack, Detroit; H. A. Montgomery, Decatur, Ill.; C. H. Poulton, San Antonio, Tex.; Jerry Decker, Detroit; Dick Shaughnessy, Dedham, Mass.; George Deyoe, Washington; Alex Kerr, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Bob Parker, Tulsa, Okla.; L. R. Ford, Indianapolis; and W. R. Wapley, Washington.

Shaughnessy is the present holder of the national title. Another 100 targets were to be run off today, and the final 50 will be shot tomorrow.

The Westbrook Cardinals of New York, including Shaughnessy, S. L. Hutcheson of Greenwich, Conn., W. R. Ragsdale of Boston, Dave Sklar of Brooklyn and Ed Garland of Belleville, N. J., led for five-nan team honors, with a score of 495 out of a possible 500.

Big Ray Starr, of the Indianapolis hurling corps, seems to be having quite a time of it in his efforts to rack up his 20th win. He failed again in his third try as second-place Minneapolis edged him and his teammates, 6 to 5. Although his buddies garnered 13 safeties against nine for the winning Millers, 11 Indians bit the dust on the bases.

The win for the Millers cut Columbus' first-place margin to 2½ games, as the Red Birds came out on the short end of a similar 6 to 5 score in a tilt with Kansas City. Bud Metheny's three-run homer in the eighth sunk the hopes of 11,550 Columbus fans. The Blues outlived the Flock, 13 to 8.

Bill Butland, Louisville moundsman who has seen six of his last eight losses go against him by a single tally, finally won one of the close ones. He was credited with a 4 to 3 victory over St. Paul, although Bill Fleming helped him out in the ninth.

AA squads broke even in a pair of exhibition contests which preceded the regular tilts. Columbus lost one to their parent St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 2, while Indianapolis failed to show filial affection for their sponsors, whipping the Cincinnati Reds by the same score.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—A red-faced bunch of Cincinnati Reds invaded Chicago today for a series with the Chicago Cubs, figuring that they must have a win coming.

Last night they dropped an exhibition tilt to their Hoosier Farmhands, the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association, by a 3 to 2 score. The two runs indicate that again the Reds weren't able to hit their weight. Elmer "The Great" Riddle, leading Reds hurler, will go after his 12th win of the season as against only two losses. He will be opposed by Olsen, who has a nine-won-five-lost record.

CINCINNATI '11' VICTOR IN STATE LEGION TOURNEY

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The Cincinnati team, which outslugged Warren to win a 15 to 10 verdict and the championship of the 15th annual Ohio American Legion baseball tourney, today looked forward to the regional finals, in which it will meet the champions of Michigan, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

After seeing an early 7 to 2 lead go glimmering, the Cincinnati squad punched out six of its 20 hits in the ninth to come from behind in a six-run rally. Second Baseman Charles Apostol paced the River City lads at bat with four hits and a walk.

Although held in check for the most part by Cincinnati hurlers Macke and Brickner, Warren went on a spree of its own in the fourth frame which netted seven runs. In that frame they combined three of their 13 hits with three walks and a pair of errors to take over a temporary lead. Warren Center Fielder Clarence Gillen led his squad at the plate with three for five.

It was the second straight year Warren lost out in the finals.

The Trumbull County boys reached the finals by drubbing Lima, 10 to 3, in a morning contest. Letho, who also started the final tilt for Warren, struck out 16 Lima batters and allowed only six hits.

Cincinnati's only defeat in the double-elimination tourney was by Lima, and, was avenged the next day in a return engagement.

Taft Wright, White Sox, who hit two homers against Browns. Bob Johnson, A's, whose three run homer paced teammates to victory over Yankees.

'Man of Week' Honors Go to Frankie Frisch

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
The Pittsburgh Pirates are managed by one of the most fiery bolts of humanity that ever pulled on a spiked shoe.

At the outset of the current campaign, this dynamic little guy predicted he had the makings of a fine ball club. Few believed him. The Pirates, even as late as May, seemed hopelessly floundering in last place of the National League. Prospects that they would emerge from second division were next to none.

Their manager was not the kind to give up, and neither were his players; so, the team then started the dizzyest victory march of the season, and now they are in third place and within hailing distance of the pacemaking St. Louis and Brooklyn teams.

The answer to Pittsburgh's phenomenal upward surge — if any one name can be given as the answer—is Frank Frisch.

Since the Pirates are continuing their rollicking pace toward the pennant heights, International News Service today selected manager Frisch as the man of the week in sports.

Frisch is a National Leaguer of the so-called old school. He flashed himself off Fordham University's campus to the Polo Grounds and immediately became a fighting fixture on the late John McGraw's Giants. Fresh from Fordham, where he starred in both football and baseball, Frankie became one of the few collegians able to bridge the athletic chasm between a campus and the major leagues.

The year was 1919, and from then until 1926 Frisch was an infield bulwark for the giants.

He was traded to St. Louis for the next season in a deal that brought Rogers Hornsby to New York.

Frisch was voted the National League's most valuable player in 1931 when he helped the Cardinals win the pennant, and two years later he was appointed manager of the Red Birds. It was the time of the Gas House gang, as the Cardinals were tabbed; and Frankie Frisch became a guiding spirit of modern-day rough house on the diamond. The Cards battled for every run and every out, and Frisch helped them even to the extent of winning a reputation as an umpire baiter of 1.0 small ability.

In 1938, his last season as skipper of the Cardinals, Frisch retired as an active player, leaving behind a 19-year Major League batting average of .316. Subsequently, he became boss of the Buccaneers, and apparently is well on the way to a successful regime after two lean seasons in smoke town.

It hardly seems possible, but one week from next Wednesday Circleville High Tigers will start practicing for the 1941 football season. . . ## GRIDIRON ACE'S BIRTH RECORD BALKS SERVICE

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 9 — Nello Falaschi, former Santa Clara Broncho football star, will be back in the New York Giants pro football lineup this fall—an older and wiser man.

He registered for the draft as 27 years old, and was classified immediately available for selective service. But Nello's mother today produced baptismal records proving he was born at Los Banos, Calif., in 1913, making his present age 28.

Draft board officials were notified of the football players' correct age and promptly deferred him.

Twenty-eight was Falaschi's football number at Santa Clara.

Paul Erickson Baffles Pirates; Wyatt Puts Dodgers In Lead

By Pat Robinson
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Until today the only thing we knew about Paul "Swede" Erickson (spelled with one R) was that he was not to be confused with Richard Merriwell Erickson (spelled with two R's).

Now, however, Paul "Swede" Erickson is a name we are not likely to forget. Nor are the Pirates likely to forget him. For it was he who pitched a one-hit 1-0 victory over them for the Cubs yesterday, snapped their winning streak at six games and dropped them 8½ games back of the league-leading Dodgers.

That was Swede's first Major League victory and judging by the way he mowed down the hard-hitting Pirates it certainly won't be his last.

Offhand, we can't seem to recall any pitcher whose maiden Major League victory was more sensational and, only for Bob Elliott's harmless single in the seventh, this 23 year old right hander would be in baseball's hall of fame.

This big fellow—he's six-feet-two and scales 200—bats from Zion, Ill. He has had four years in the minors. Two at Ponca City, one at St. Joseph where he was strike-out king of the Western Association and last year at Tulsa where he picked up a few tips from Dizzy Dean.

His chief stock in trade is said to be speed. And let's see—wasn't that the same commodity that brought fame to Walter Johnson, Pete Alexander, Smokey Joe Wood, Bullet Joe Bush, Lefty Grove, Dizzy Dean, Dazzy Vance and Bob Feller?

Wyatt Winner

Speed and a little control can carry a youngster far in baseball and young Erickson (with one R) seems to have both. That is the same combination Whitlow Wyatt used yesterday in scoring his 15th victory at the expense of Jim Tobin of the Braves. Wyatt gave only six hits and breezed in, 6 to 2. That made seven in a row for the Dodgers and moved them back into the lead over the idle Cardinals who today must start an all-important series with the rampant Pirates.

Meanwhile the Giants were traveling 11 innings to beat the lowly Phils, 3-2, in a game they should have lost 2-1 in regulation innings. Bill Lohman went the route for the Giants and was returned a winner over Cy Blanton when Babe Young opened the 11th with his 15th homer. An error by Merrill May gave the Giants an unearned run that sent the game into overtime.

The slaughter of pitching innocents was terrific in the other circuit where the Red Sox hammered out a 15-8 decision over the Senators and where the White Sox teed off on the Browns to win, 16 to 2, in a game in which Taft Wright collected two homers and George Dickey one, the three blows being good for eight runs.

And in a night game at Philadelphia, the Athletics defeated the Yankees 5 to 3 after garnering four runs in a fifth inning rally which included Bob Johnson's homer with two men on base. Charley Keller was the Yankee batting hero with three doubles and a single in four times at bat.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York—Lou Salica, 113, New York, bantamweight champion, defeated Henry Hook, 126, Indianapolis (10).

Abe Kauffman, 134, Philadelphia, knocked out Frank Cusumano, 141, New York (5).

At Asbury Park, N. J.—Tippy Larkin, 135, Garfield, N. J., defeated George Zengara, 132, New York (10).

ALSAB FAVORED TO FINISH FIRST IN CHICAGO RACE

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Alsab, who as a yearling was bought by Mrs. Albert Sabath for only $700 and who to date has won $33,095, was a heavy favorite to win the $2,500 Juvenile Stakes at Washington Park today.

Alsab, carrying an impost of 126 pounds, was pitted against such youngsters as Sweep Singer, Zig Zag, Emoument, K. Dorko, Memphis, Bright Willie, At Liberty and Valinda Orphan.

Mrs. Sabath's sensational colt cleaned up with ease in the only two stakes in which he competed at Arlington Park — the Primer and the Hyde Park.

HAWAIIAN STAR SETS PACE OVER SWIMMING FOES

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 9.—Led by a 17-year-old star, a Hawaiian team from Alexander Community House at Maui today held a long lead in the race for team honors at the National Outdoor A.A.U. men's swimming championships.

In three events last night, the Hawaiians captured all the major point-winning places except first place in the 300-meter medley relay event, which was won by the Chicago Towers Team of Adolph Kiefer, George Lowe and Otto Jaretz.

Kiefer, Lowe and Jaretz were defending champions in the medley, and they negotiated the distance in the fast time of 3:29.1. The Hawaiians were second, the Olympic Club of San Francisco was third, and the Pasadena Athletic Club placed fourth.

The championship event will conclude tomorrow. At the close of last night's events, the point totals were:
Alexander House, Hawaii, . . . 24
Towers Club, Chicago, . . . 13
Ohio State University, . . . 5
Olympic Club, S. Francisco, . . . 4
Bill Smith, 17, swam the 200-meter free style in 2:16.1 to take first place, and his Hawaiian teammates, Takashi Hirose and Paul Herron, placed second and third.

Possums, it seems, don't "play possum." Their behavior is a faint, not a feint.

Date for Young People's Meeting At Camp Ground Is Drawing Near

Delegates From Over State To Gather August 19

Plans for opening the twenty-fourth annual Church of Christ camp meeting with the Young People's State Rally on Tuesday, August 19, have been completed. Speaker at the rally, to be held on the Mount of Praise Camp Ground, will be the Rev. Paul Thomas of Indianapolis, Ind.

The young people's rally annually attracts thousands of young people from all parts of the state. Last year the program was moved to the large tabernacle on the grounds when the Young People's building failed to provide adequate space.

Following the young people's rally will be the annual council of the Churches of Christ in Christian Union of Ohio. The council will open Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 p. m., the devotional services being directed by the Rev. T. N. Kerr. The Rev. E. A. Keaton of Chillicothe will deliver the Moderator's address. During the afternoon committees will be appointed to serve during the camp meeting. The first day's program will close with a public preaching service at 8 p. m., the Rev. W. L. Cozad of Lancaster delivering the address.

The council session will continue Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, closing Saturday evening at 8 o'clock with public preaching. A young people's hour and ring meeting directed by the Rev. Rufus Rinehart and a song service directed by E. Clay Milby will feature the closing program.

Since Monday camp ground officials have been busy clearing the camp grounds for the opening of the meeting. Food supplies are being stocked in the camp ground dining hall. Cottages are being repaired and the tabernacle cleaned and made ready for a crowd which church officials estimate will be the largest ever to attend.

Benches are being constructed outside the tabernacle to accommodate the crowds.

Evangelists will be the Rev. T. M. Anderson, the Rev. Bona Fleming, the Rev. John Church, E. Clay Milby, song evangelist and the Rev. Edna Leonard, children's worker.

BAPTIST CHURCH UNIT TO GATHER HERE AUG. 15-17

Scioto Association of Primitive Baptist Churches in central Ohio will meet at the Walnut Township School building Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 15, 16 and 17, for its 137th annual program.

Friday morning's session will begin at 10 o'clock. Elder G. F. Hanover of near Ashville serving as moderator. After an introductory sermon, letters from each of the ten member churches will be read. Preaching services will be held each morning and afternoon session thereafter; morning at 9:30 afternoon at 1:30.

Ministers are expected from each of the four other Primitive Baptist Associations in Ohio, and from Michigan and Indiana.

The Council body will convene Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. The present clerk is O. W. Cory of Frankfort, who has served in that office for several years. Officers will be chosen during the Friday afternoon Council meeting.

James Teaches Christian Living

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—The Epistle of James

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God... and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering, said St. James.

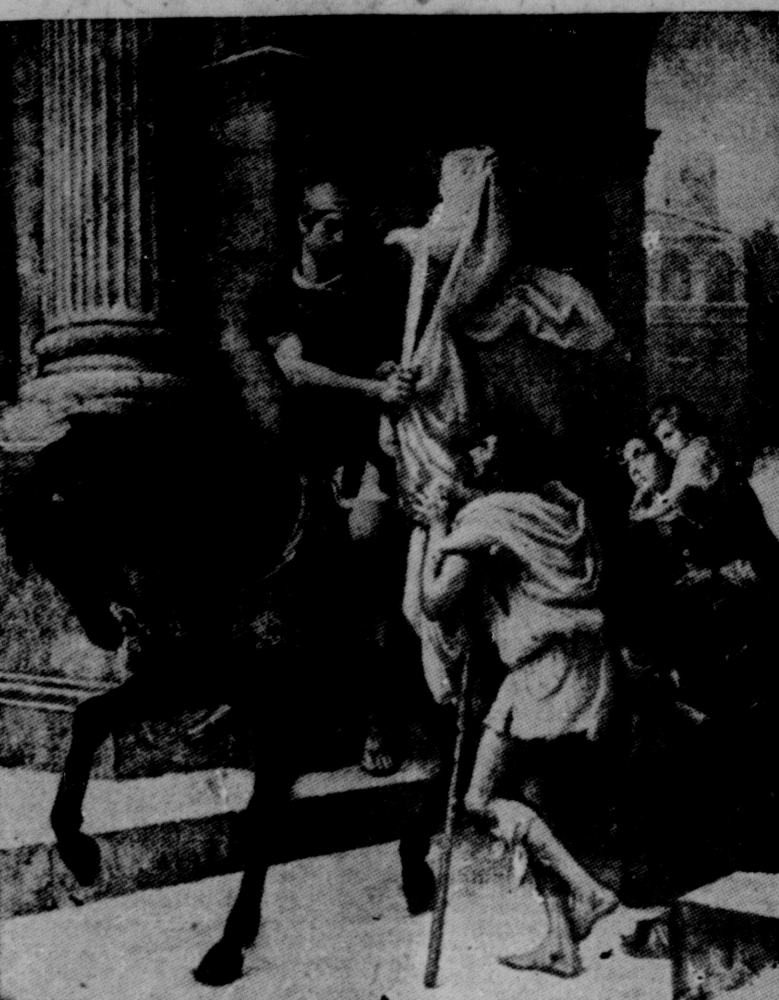

Blessed is the man who endureth temptation: for he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him.

Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, for a hearer is like a man beholding his face in a glass, who forgets what manner of man he was.

Pure religion and undefiled is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world. (Golden Text—James 1:27.)

Consistent Christian Living Taught

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Newman Campbell
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for August 10 is the Epistle of James, the Golden Text being James 1:27, "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world.")

IF YOU were to take one single book from the Bible as your guide for Christian living, you could do no better than to use the book of James. It contains only five chapters, but in it are all the necessary rules for living the good life.

There is a disagreement among Bible students as to the author's identity. Many think this James is the brother of Jesus, and certain it is that his message is very like that of Jesus. It is the Sermon on the Mount in a little different guise. It is thought the epistle was written earlier than that of St. Paul, or the Acts, around A. D. 51, and possibly earlier.

It is directed to the "twelve tribes which are scattered abroad," meaning the Jewish Christians, not the Gentiles. St. James says in the beginning of his epistle that a Christian should be glad when he is assailed by temptation, for temptation tries his faith, which works for patience, or we might say that by resisting temptation he gains strength.

When We Lack Wisdom
Are we troubled as to our problems? Do we lack wisdom? Let us ask God for help, having faith that He will show us the right way.

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh from the Father of Lights, with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." That is a verse to memorize and repeat when your hearts are troubled, is it not?

"Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." Swift to hear, alert, but slow to speak for fear he say the wrong thing in anger, when if he reflected a moment he would keep still.

Listen attentively to those who would instruct you, read earnestly of the good book, but "be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, for if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like a man (or woman) who looks in the mirror, but when he walks away, he cannot remember what he looked like.

"If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." For, "pure religion and undefiled before God the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Good deeds and self-control show the faith that is in us much more than perfect church attendance and unchristian conduct all the rest of the week.

Next St. James attacks the person who bows down obsequiously before the rich man, but slight the poor. Rich men are not necessarily evil, of course. They may be as good as those who are poor. But they should not be given undue privileges merely because they are wealthy. And James reminds his readers that there are rich men who oppress and cheat the poor.

"If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well."

Sympathy Not Enough
Again, it is not enough to be sympathetic to those poorer than yourselves, those who are in want. To say to those in need, "Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled," without giving them the things that they need will not profit us. "Even so, faith, if it hath not works, is dead."

Abraham had faith, he reminds us, but when the time came, he was willing even to sacrifice his own son, to show that "faith wrought with his works."

In chapter three he speaks of the power of the tongue for evil. He reminds us that we put bits into horses' mouths and guide these large beasts by the small bit. Great ships, too, are guided and turned by a small helm. The tongue is a little bit of the body, yet what trouble it can make for us! Every kind of beast has been tamed by man, but his own tongue, few men can tame.

"Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing my brethren, these things ought not so to be." "Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom."

"Bitter envying and strife in your hearts" are the cause of wars, says James. "Ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain; ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not."

Isn't that true? "For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work."

"But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceful, gentle and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

"And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."

One of the largest cakes ever baked was ordered by Frederick William I of Prussia in 1730. It contained 36 bushels of flour, 200 gallons of milk, one ton of butter, one ton of yeast and 5,000 eggs. The amount of sugar is not mentioned. When finished it was 18 yards long, 8 yards wide and more than one-half yard thick, and 30,000 soldiers could not eat it all.

RUSSIA AND POLAND

RUSSIA, which for so long seemed dull and stupid to the rest of the world, is proving herself smart. One of her better and more intelligent moves was that to ally herself with Poland, to give back to the Poles the territory which she took over when the Nazis moved in and took the other half, and to get the Poles, those fierce and determined fighters for freedom, lined up on her side.

The little nations which have been sitting passively in the Nazi path, hoping they wouldn't be taken for the next bite, willing to fight as well as they could against the Nazi machine, but knowing themselves comparatively helpless, were in a bad way themselves, and they offered Hitler a chance to pick up a little oil and food as he went along. They were not valuable assets to the free cause and were only too much in danger of becoming liabilities.

Russia apparently decided that Poland would be better off both for itself and as a possible asset to Russia if its land were restored. It is not likely that the motives of Russia were purely altruistic. But the effect is that of assistance to the Allies.

The bear, during the last few years, seems to have been merely hibernating. Now that it is awake and showing itself ready to fight for its honey, its forepaws might close around the Nazi armies in a deadly grip.

SAVING GAS

THE commerce department gives ten suggestions for saving gas. They are useful rules at any time, but especially now, when every gallon is so badly needed in the fight for freedom. Here they are:

Avoid racing the engine.

Use first and second gear no longer than necessary.

Maintain a fair operating speed of not more than forty miles per hour.

Avoid rapid acceleration and deceleration, "Jackrabbit" starts and too rapid stops.

Shut off motor while waiting, making calls or deliveries.

Plan travel so that one car can serve more than one person going in the same direction.

Do not make individual trips for various activities when the objects of the travel may be correlated and covered in one circular trip.

Have carburetors and ignition checked frequently and wheel and lubrication as well.

Maintain tire pressures at 5 to 10 per-

BRASS RING TO S. BECHHOLD

WASHINGTON—The scene is a conference room in the War Department. Seated round a long table are a group of generals and manufacturers — British as well as American. In front of each is a microphone, but the discussion is not being broadcast to a listening world. It is strictly confidential, with each detail transcribed on a wax recording and filed so there shall be no mistake about the promises being made to the United States or Britain.

At the head of the table is a slight, mild-mannered man with thinning grey hair, General G. M. Barnes of the Ordnance Corps. Seated near him are Ed Hunt of Chrysler, H. B. Ensign of American Car and Foundry, Charles Wright of Pullman Standard, H. S. Colby of Baldwin Locomotive, S. Bechhold of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and several others.

This is the Tank Committee. And to the men around this table has recently come word that President Roosevelt demands more tanks, and in a hurry.

Already the members of the Tank Committee and their factories have 4,700 light and medium tanks on order and are turning them out at the rate of 300 a month. In addition to the American orders, this group has a British order for $200,000,000 worth of medium tanks.

However, Germany has a reserve alone of 6,500 tanks. And with every battle on the Russian front showing the ever increasing importance of the tank, Roosevelt has now written identical letters to Secretary of War Stimson and OPM bosses Knudsen and Hillman, demanding that tank production be rushed full speed.

BRITISH NEED TANKS

LACK of tanks, it has now leaked out, is why the British have not been able to land an invading force on the European continent. Also it is why the British could not continue the offensive in Libya.

The companies represented by the gentlemen seated around the table of the Tank Committee have done an excellent job of producing tanks. They are turning them out more quickly than the Army expected. But even so, when they reach full production they will only produce about 800 tanks a month.

At this rate, which will not be reached for another year, it will take two years to match the reserves accumulated by Hitler.

Therefore, the chief question facing the OPM and American industry is to spread out tank production among other factories: first, by letting smaller firms make tank parts on sub-contract; second, by drafting a great many other factories now cent above manufacturers' recommendations.

Avoid spilling gasoline and the filling of the tanks to within more than one gallon of capacity.

Americans are happy to salute this venerable publication and wish it well as it starts its second hundred years.

Uncle Sam is reaching out not to pull that war closer to us, but to push it off.

War Jitters May Bring on Stomach Troubles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

War jitters seem to have penetrated into every field of human activity. They certainly seem to have reached the doctors if the reports I receive from various medical meetings can be trusted.

One of these states that war jitters have increased constipation, and another says they have increased diarrhoea. One says they have increased the acid in the stomach causing stomach ulcers, and another that they have dried up all the acid in a lot of people's stomachs causing atonic dyspepsia.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Maybe all four are right. The stomach is a funny thing; and then there were the blind men and the elephant. One of them was right, when he got hold of the leg and concluded the elephant is like a tree, and the other was right when he got hold of the trunk and concluded the elephant is like a snake.

Stomach Ulcer

The reports to which I refer started when it was stated that among the men who came through the hell of Dunkirk there was 300 per cent more stomach ulcer than in the rest of the population. But the rest of the population suffered also and there has been a great increase in stomach complaints among the civilian population of London. This is attributed to hasty eating, irregular hours, nervousness, or war jitters, and coarse food.

Constipation too, the type known as spastic, where the bowel is supposed to get tied up in hard knots, is reported as the result of the war. Well, constipation of some type was here before the war. I have never subscribed very much to the idea of the spastic type of constipation. I always thought when the bowels got tied up in hard knots they went into diarrhoea, so I am likely to subscribe to the fellow who thinks the war has caused a lot of functional diarrhoea.

The reports on the occurrence of peptic ulcer from war jitters say that this causes a great outflow of acid and the acid eats the ulcer in the stomach. Well now, we certainly do not know the cause of ulcer. Plenty of people have increased in stomach acid without having ulcer, and coarse food and irregular eating habits do not cause it, because it is commoner in those who are dainty in their food habits and like processed food, than it is in those who live on coarse food and have to take it at irregular intervals.

The explanation probably is that the stomach is the most emotional and temperamental organ in the body except maybe the intestines. And it is no wonder the cause of the present situation here and the body tied up in hard knots. If possible cultivate a philosophy — plenty of philosophy. Protect your poor old jittery stomach by not taking the war too hard. They say nothing is as bad as it seems. Maybe that even includes the war.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sufferer: "Please publish an article on the Douleurieux. Is surgery the only cure?"

Answer: Trifacial neuralgia, or the Douleurieux, is a very crippling and painful affliction. No one thing is certain to cure. Some cases respond to one thing and some to another. When very severe surgery is recommended.

M. S.: "Is cottonseed oil beneficial for use in colitis? If so, do you take it inwardly or by enema?"

Answer: If the colitis is not ulcerative colitis, cottonseed oil 3 ounces at night as a retention enema is helpful, but remember the enema habit is as bad as the cathartic habit. So do not get into the habit of using enemas.

CHAPTER TWENTY

NONE OF the disappointment Ylena felt at learning that Brodie, the hatchet-faced foreman, was to be their driver, showed on her face. It was serene as she gazed at Scott. He looked bronzed and handsome in Lewis and a hand-stitched blue cowboy shirt. Definitely the broad-shouldered, stalwart westerner. No wonder the women flocked about him! Unbelievably, Ylena found herself resenting their interest, then quickly forced aside that twinge of jealousy and climbed into the station wagon.

Back in La Madera the hospitable Aunt Daisy spouted insistent invitations, but the girl refused. She took her car out of Aunt Daisy's garage and again went to the Alvarez hotel. As she had on her first day in that little city, she stood in her room looking out over traffic, business buildings, ranch houses, desert hills. Here I am, she thought, exactly where I started. Actually, I'm no nearer having Carlyle. I'm all alone. And I haven't a home. Then she corrected herself. No, not exactly where I started, because now I do have friends and money.

In the advertising section of the paper slipped beneath her door the following morning, Ylena noticed the description of a shop which she felt sure would suit her needs. Included in a lengthy list of rentals it was headed by the names, Cromwell and Cromwell. She lifted the receiver and asked to be connected with that real estate firm, then as quickly changed her mind and requested breakfast.

To the waiter who brought her tray she gave a dollar tip and instructions.

A moment later he turned from the telephone to report: $3,500 a year. Helpfully he added: "It sounds like that place on the corner of Alvarado and Main boulevard. I know it's empty and it has an apartment above. It's a grand location, lady." He gave a chuckle. "You know how old man Cromwell is. I practically had to hang up on him to keep from giving my name."

Ylena thanked him. "Don't mention it to anyone."

"I should say not. And thank YOU!"

Two or three hours later Ylena herself called the Cromwells offices, asking for Mr. Cromwell, Sr. Finally able to stop his hilarious bubbling, she said, "I've got some more money. Do you want it?"

He said, "Of course I want it, child. Do you think I'm crazy? I'll send someone right out to get it."

"Send them to the Alvarez hotel."

"The Alvarez?" he shouted. "Yeh! That reminds me. I thought we were going to sell that ranch for you. Then about the time I get a prospect here comes the report that you've sold."

"I had a lucky break." She laughed. "But I'm giving you another chance to skin me, so what are you fussing about? Have a salesman here at 3 o'clock." Let it be.

One-Minute Test

1. What is the term of office of the treasurer of the United States?
2. Are fixed stars in motion?
3. Who was Eugene Sandow?

Words of Wisdom

Such as thy words are, such will thine affections be esteemed; and such as thine affections, will be thy deeds; and such as thy deeds will be thy life.—Socrates.

Today's Horoscope

Although substantial gain and promotion will come the way of those who have birthdays today, they should curb excessive expenditure and guard against pecuniary imposition on the part of womenfolk. The child who is born on this date should early be taught the value of money, and to distinguish between false and true friends. Although such a one will be financially very fortunate, impudence is strongly evidenced.

Hints on Etiquette

It is correct and gracious for a young girl to stand up when she is introduced to a much older woman.

Horoscope for Sunday

Good profits through relatives, property or uncommon enterprises are promised to those who have birthdays on this day. Recognition and much happiness are promised them, but they should be on their guard against a false woman friend. Good success and popularity will be met by the child who is born on this date. He or she will be very clever and far-seeing, and possess a strong, fine character. Extensive travel is indicated for such a person.

be Tate or let it not be. She did not care.

In between time Ylena went to a specialty shop and was outfitted in a new sport dress of beige flannel with a hand-knit sweater of green. To guard her eyes from the hot, winter afternoon desert sun, she picked out wide-rimmed dark glasses and then, just because she felt like it, she added a crazy, three-strand necklace of fat pinto beans that tied about her neck with a little green suede bow. Then she went to the hotel to await her appointment. As she stepped from the hotel elevator in answer to the operator's announcement, she was flabbergasted. The man waiting directly beside the clerk's desk was a decidedly uncomfortable Percy O'Neill. When the girl saw him she made a dead stop, then progressed slowly.

Her eyes were narrowed and she led him away from the vicinity of the curious clerk. "Don't tell me you're the salesman? I'm not so sure I want to go with you."

Percy's fat face flushed. "I'm no more pleased about it than you. But what can you do when—?"

Ylena interrupted rudely. "When Pop Cromwell says, 'Get to work!' So you're in business." She grinned like a street urchin and continued her insolence. "Sometime when I have a free week I'd love to hear about your selling the Grand Canyon. I'm sure you've turned a number of big deals like that. Since you're so displeased about showing me around, I've decided to go after all. I'll probably enjoy myself."

Percy looked at her. This was not the quiet Ylena of that Sunday dinner. "My car is out front," he gruffly offered.

"Oh," she said with meaning when they reached the curved entrance at the side of the hotel.

"Tate's car. I'm not going to ride in Tate's car. Frankie might not like it. We'll go in mine." Not giving him a chance to protest, she led the way to her own machine, parked across the street. She slid behind the wheel and pressed the button that let down the top.

"I think I'll ask you to excuse me," Percy stood, foot on the running board.

Ylena kept right on snapping the clamps that held down the folded top. "I have a $3,500 check in my purse, already made out to Cromwell and Cromwell. And it's a good one." She shook her head at O'Neill, who was puffing with fury. "You know perfectly well Pop Cromwell won't like it if I call and tell him you were rude to me." She slid behind the wheel.

Percy crawled in beside her, holding himself stiffly erect. "What sort of place do you want?" he asked curiously.

She gave an airy retort. "I don't know. You direct me. Show me what you have and I'll decide."

As they rode along crowded streets, they attracted a great deal of attention. That staring-eyed, neck-craning sort it pleased Ylena and cast a lasting, ruddy glow over Percy.

Ylena smiled as he restlessly moved about. She told him in a pleasant voice, "People will be gossiping about you as much as you did about me."

He ignored her insinuation and barked orders to stop. They looked at the first house. Ylena didn't like it. They looked at a second. She didn't like it either. In answer to her dictatorial commands, for approximately two hours, he showed her first one place, then another. With all she found frank and instantaneous fault; her manner implied that Percy was personally responsible for such atrocities.

Percy O'Neill snapped, "What do you expect for $3,500?"

"Oh, not a hacienda like Mr. Cromwell's where you live. Even so this check doesn't have to pay the total. It could go as a down payment on something a little better than a cowshed."

They were passing a series of Mexican adobe houses, a half block continuous chain of empty, deserted, dismal shacks. A large wooden Cromwell and Cromwell sign was nailed on a corner.

"My, the firm must be proud of that property."

Percy frowned. "That eyesore is the bane of the Cromwells' life. They've cut the price to practically nothing and still can't get rid of it. How I'd like to poke off that blot on some unsuspecting soul. I'd be the fair-haired boy—hey," he cautioned suddenly, "you'd better start slowing up. The high school and junior college are near here and the traffic cops are strict."

"We mustn't be thrown into jail. There'd be such a scandal, wouldn't there?" Obligingly the girl slowed to the required 15 miles per hour as they passed the little village of school buildings. "You'd better show me something else, Mr. O'Neill. So far, I don't like anything."

For another hour Percy responded to her dictatorial wishes. He was perspiring from rage and exertion. "Miss Varanoff," he finally shouted, "are you sure you want a house?"

"No," she answered calmly, "I don't want one."

He exploded. "Then what's the idea of having me waste an entire afternoon?"

"You once put me through one of the most uncomfortable afternoons of my life. I only hope you've been half so uncomfortable."

"I can assure you I have," he snapped.

"Good! Let me warn you, Percy, not to try to hurt me again, because I've built such a defense against being hurt that it really wouldn't give you much pleasure."

"If you've finished, I'll get back to the office."

"Not get. You haven't wasted your afternoon. You'll get this check yet." She reached into her purse and took out the check, also a newspaper clipping. "This is what I'm really interested in." She pointed to the pencil-encircled advertisement. "Where is this shop?"

"On the corner of Main boulevard and Alvarado road. And I can tell you right now that $3,500 will not get it."

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up somewhat tired after the Rotary farm tour of the previous afternoon. But had seen and learned much. Did not know until the visit at Howard Thomas' farm that early two-day old turks cost as much as 50 cents apiece or that 68 pounds of special feed is required to mature a bird for market. Howard explained it all and proudly exhibited his 900 Thanksgiving dinners in the making.

At the Royal Green farm did see and inspect one of the finest Jersey milk herds I ever have seen. Royal told how the cattle are milked by hand and something of how he established the herd. Told me that buying the farm and stock it had been a long up-hill pull, but that he now hopes the worst is behind him.

Burl Stevenson drove his tractor-drawn potato digger along a great row of Bliss Triumphs and one of Irish Cobblers. And what potatoes he has. Something like 400 bushels to the acre. But that production is not luck. Dug a great water pit and established a sprinkler system for 18 acres. Provided special fertilizer. Worked hard over long hours. No better potatoes in these parts.

Then we saw the Stevenson Hereford herd. John and Elizabeth proudly displayed two calves that will be on exhibition at our Pumpkin Show. We attempted to judge them, but no outstanding ability was displayed. Admired the beef herd as it should be admired and then headed for the final stop at the Kermit Thomas farm to see that great new barn. Size 36 by 80, and that is quite a structure. Lots of turkeys on that place too.

Charlie Brunner cried and is not one whit ashamed, which is as it should be. For Scrummy, his little white companion for 12 years, is dead. Charlie took him for a walk every day, rain or shine. Scrummy was known to everyone. Now he reposes in Charlie's back yard not far from the door. Buried in a special casket made by Tom Gilliland's mechanics.

Maggie is another dog, very much alive although very old.

She owns Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Pile, of Edison Avenue. When the 11:30 whistle blows each week-day Maggie hunts a small sliver of wood or an actual toothpick, which are placed in convenient spots for her searching eyes, and then she goes to the kitchen to ask for her lunch. No, she does not pick her teeth afterward. Just shows the toothpick to indicate that she knows it is time to eat.

And here is another "believe it or not." Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Barnes, 901 S. Washington Street, have 43 pullets that started laying when 17 weeks old. In 26 days they produced 515 eggs.

Don't forget the voting next Tuesday. And, unless you wish a decrease in already hampered services you accept as your absolute right, then you should vote for that special levy. Not much of a hoist, but it will provide necessary funds for city administration. Look into that situation right now and go to the polls informed on this subject. Otherwise you may regret your neglect.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Fall Gardens
I see a few of them in southern Ohio and they are doing very well. We should have them at every farm home. Then they have a place in the city home, where some gardening is done for the family.

Beautiful Picture
The dim outline of distant hills in Ross County covered with a thin veil of lacy fog is a picture that I slowed down the car to admire. There will be many such pictures in the corn belt, as the season changes from summer to fall, with the gorgeous array of colors, present on every landscape as the leaves ripen. Get the habit of looking for these pictures and it will add much to your joy of living.

Something To Worry About
I refer to a field of mammoth clover that has gone down on a thin field. It will not have as much value for hay as it had been cut before it lodged, but when the land is plowed in the late fall or early spring, much organic matter and food material will be added to the soil. That's something to worry about as one man expressed it. The hay crop will not all be cut, but the loss of this crop will be regained next year in the increased yield of corn, if we have a favorable season.

Over Ripe Timothy Hay
We just passed a field of over ripe timothy hay that was being put into the shock. "That's good horse hay, but it is not very good for sheep and dairy cattle," I said to Mrs. Berry, who was driving for me.

I am reminded now that timothy hay cut, just as the heads appear, has almost as much protein as red clover hay. It is much more palatable, too, than when it is ripe and the seeds are falling from the tops of the heads.

Clover Seed
Present indications are that there will be a good crop of clover seed this year in the corn belt. Southern Ohio will have its share; and we produce very good seed here.

Some of our readers might tell me how to avoid clover failures on our farm. The drought in May hurt the stand of the early spring seeding, and killed all of it last year.

Sweet clover, that was well distributed in the field, in the early spring, when a crop was plowed under last year has "closed the gap" as a soldier would express it, and prevented a legume crop failure. We'll get a good hay crop from the sweet clover seeding this year. It is making a very rapid growth since the wheat was cut. Sweet clover hay, that is cut the first year, has a feeding value for sheep and dairy cattle that is almost as high as alfalfa, but it is not quite as palatable. One man of my acquaintance said his beef calves wouldn't eat it, until they were "starved to it" as he expressed it, and then they made very good gains. This man always sows it on his bottom fields so he can get a crop of legume hay the same year he cuts his wheat. His rotation is corn, wheat and sweet clover. Some years he has good success in sowing sweet clover in the corn at the last cultivation, so he has three crops in two years, and a legume growing on the land, almost all the time. How is that for farming? "He's stepping on the gas" is the way a neighbor expressed it, and since he uses acid phosphate liberally on his bottom fields, he is building the soil all the time.

Baled Straw
You see a lot of it in the corn

belt this year. Some men bale only what they clean up around the stack; some bale all the straw as soon as they thresh, and put it into the barn for winter bedding; while those who use a combine, rake some of it in winrows, and have it baled in the field.

There is a machine on the market now that picks up the straw from the swath, after the combine, and bales it as it slowly moves across the field. Oscar Lyle of Hillsboro, R.F.D. 1, had a four acre field baled with one of these machines this year, and he was well pleased with the work it did.

I was on this farm a few hours after this baler had gone, and Mr. Lyle and his father and boys were picking up the bales in a low trailer, behind their farm tractor. "It is low, so we don't have to lift the bales as high as if we were using a wagon" Mr. Lyle said. They soon got on a load of 22 bales and hurried it into the barn, in high gear and came back for another load. We are surely moving rapidly in the development of practical farm machinery.

The Scent of New Mown Hay
What a wealth of pleasant memories just came to me when I caught the scent of new mown hay, as I passed a beautiful farm home. The hay making season was one of the happiest on the home farm, and I expect one of the most profitable, for Father always made much more hay than he needed, and had no trouble in selling the surplus, in the spring, at a good price. He liked to farm with a mow of good hay ahead, when the stock went out on pasture. Then he liked to have a crop of corn ahead, so if we had a "lean year" he could still grow some stock hogs, and raise some young stock. He sold most of the hogs as soon as they would bring $10.00. "Let the next man make as much clear profit as I did," he often said. "It can't be done" he would add, and he was right about it.

He bought and paid for three farms while we three boys and a sister were growing up.

Good Field of DeKalb Hybrid Corn
We just passed a very good field of DeKalb hybrid corn near South Bloomfield in Pickaway County. That's the drought resistant hybrid that is just coming into the corn belt. It was standing the drought well, too, while some fields in the community were "fired" half way to the ears. It will pay you to watch this hybrid and to try it in a small way on your farm. In the meantime, you can depend on such tested hybrids as U. S. 44 and Iowa 939, that yield well and stand up well, year after year.

Today's Garden-Graph

Specimen Tomatoes in Small Areas

The home gardener who has only a small area to devote to tomatoes will get better results if the plants are supported by stakes rather than allowed to roam over the ground. The fruits will be larger, of a better color and will develop earlier.

Tomatoes should be pruned as they grow. Some gardeners prefer to train them to a single main stem while others prefer leaving two, three or even four of the strongest bottom branches to develop.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, keep the suckers pruned out, taking care not to break off the flowering stems which appear just at the base of the side shoots. Tomatoes require lots of water and after obtaining considerable growth respond rapidly to feedings of manure water or applications of nitrate of soda, using a teaspoonful to a plant.

TWO YOUTHS WALK AWAY FROM JAIL; SEARCH IS SPREAD

Sheriff, Aides Broadcast Description Of Two Fleeing Trustees

Sheriff's deputies were continuing a search Saturday for two trustees who walked away Friday from the Pickaway County jail.

They were Forrest Schaffer, 27, 1299 Fulton Street, Columbus, and Harvey Winn, 19, Circleville, Route 3. Both had been granted the freedom of the Court House yard in preference to the jail, and were assigned to various jobs around the County Jail buildings. Jail employees discovered they were missing early Friday afternoon and a quick search around the Court House grounds revealed both youths had disappeared. A notice of their escape was broadcast over the state highway patrol radio, but no apprehension has been made.

Schaffer was arrested by Railroad Detective G. C. Hunter on April 21 for angle-cocking a Norfolk and Western freight train. He was fined $300 and costs and had 98 days yet to serve in jail. Winn was fined $50 and costs for stealing gasoline. He was committed on June 21 and had 90 days yet to serve.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, August 9

CONFLICTING though not entirely adverse conditions prevail on this day according to the dominant astral testimonies. The inner urges and faculties will be found keyed to high levels of enterprise, adventure and innovation, with brilliant strokes of genius directed toward the inauguration of new and important undertakings. While the energies and abilities may justify this, danger lies in overdoing, over optimism and enthusiasm, to the extent of squandering the where-withal, financial and physical, to the hazard of worthy propositions. With extravagance, speculation and high chances eliminated there might be surprising success. Intimate associations are subject to similar exaggerations. Moderation and temperate behavior will be beneficial in all affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which their own powers of restraint, calmness, moderation and sagacity may prove the determining factor of their success and happiness. Under the urge of greatly stimulated forces and faculties in the direction of major enterprises, through new and audacious methods and perhaps radical innovations, there might be great accomplishments. But these may be jeopardized by a spirit of excess, extravagance and prodigality, manifested in lavish use of finances, energy, ideas, and emotions as well. Such perils also enter into the personal and intimate relations.

A child born on this day while it may be endowed with qualities of genius, generosity and magnanimity, yet may be a spendthrift of its substance — mental, emotional and financial. It may be easily victimized.

For Sunday, August 10

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a moderately propitious and encouraging one, with the affairs of the clergy, elders, workers and students under fortunate vibrations for success. Profound reflection as well as explorations into the higher realms of thought and speculation — scientific, philosophical or occult — would be profitable, also romantic yearnings may be indulged. But in all keep alert to intrigue, duplicity, curious or unwholesome indulgence or snares. Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of moderate success and enjoyment, under the spur of elders, relatives, of property interests or sound business enterprise. This latter may respond to factors of the new and speculative, into which advanced ideas and original propositions may hold the weight of serious study and practical bases. But in all affairs, especially in private associations, be vigilant to snares and pitfalls. A child born on this day should be studious, practical and sound, although having unusual talents, ideas or ideals. All should combine for its success and happiness.

In the directions of Kexholm, Smolensk, Korosten, Byelaya-Tserkov and on the Estonian sector.

"The air force dealt blows to enemy Panzer troops and infantry and attacked aircraft and airdromes. Twenty-one German aircraft were destroyed on August 7 while we lost 14.

"On the afternoon of August 7 our fighters shot down a German reconnaissance aircraft near Moscow. The crew was captured.

The Moscow radio continued its campaign to ridicule the recent German victory claims—broadcasting an English-language skit entitled "Much Ado About Nothing."

The broadcast parodied for the four special German victory communiques.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Annihilation of encircled Soviet forces 60 miles southeast of the fallen Russian city of Smolensk was announced today by the German high command.

A special communique, issued direct from Chancellor Adolf Hitler's headquarters, said more than 38,000 prisoners were taken along with 359 guns and other war material.

Panzer Win Again To the south, on the Ukrainian Front, German Panzer forces were credited with another spectacular victory. A high command communique, proclaiming destruction of 25 Soviet divisions, said the Russians had lost more than 200,000 men killed and wounded in the new operations.

The statement claimed that the sixth and 12th and part of the 15th Red field armies had been knocked out of action.

Meanwhile, authorized German military quarters hailed what they called "the end of the first week of decisive operations on the Eastern Front."

The week, they said, was marked by brilliant successes in the southern sector "while operations in other sectors also are progressing most satisfactorily." The present tide of battle, they said, is comparable to the Artois conflict in the Battle of Flanders which ended in the Dunkirk disaster.

Refusing to deny or confirm that Russian planes had reached Berlin during the night, these authorized quarters said:

"We are not interested in London or Moscow reports."

Meanwhile, the official communique told of great numbers of prisoners and war material captured in new Ukrainian Front actions. At least 103,000 prisoners, the statement said, were captured along with 317 tanks, 858 field guns, 5,280 motor trucks and other arms and munitions.

100,000 ROMANIANS DIE IN WAR AGAINST RUSSIA

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Reports in Lisbon, relayed to London by Reuters (British) news agency, said today that Romania has lost 100,000 troops on the Dniester Front. "The losses," Reuters said, "caused a great depression throughout Romania, and outbursts against Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu broke out in the principal Romanian towns."

CONTEST BITTER ONE

Democratic Leaders Confer
About Concessions That Might Be Made

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Fate of the administration's request for longer service for draftees and other soldiers lies in the minds of 40 undecided members of the House, checkups by leaders of both parties disclosed today.

A last-minute canvass on what has become one of the most bitter struggles of the session showed party heads that they can expect about 190 certain votes for the bill and 180 sure ones against it.

This leaves 40 out of a membership of 435—an unusually high vote expectancy.

Democratic whips, who have been keeping a close check on their colleagues in the controversial matter, said that a survey made since the Senate approved the extension bill showed that 44 House Democrats definitely will oppose it, 180 will vote for it, and 30 are still in doubt.

Republicans said that 136 of their members will oppose the extension, 10 will vote for it, and 10 are undecided.

Week End Rest Taken

The polls came as the House, with feeling running high on both sides, rested over the week end and prepared to start actual voting on amendments to the bill early next week.

As the Senate passed it, the measure provides for 18 months more service for draftees, national guardsmen, and regular personnel, while the House committee is backing its recommendation for an unlimited extension of service.

Faced with what they openly admit is going to be "a tough, close struggle," House Democratic leaders were conferring over concessions they may make in last minute efforts to pick up votes.

While they are waiting for further crystallization of opinion, there were strong indications the leadership may agree to an amendment to provide a one-year limitation on extra service.

South for Measure

Lineup on the measure is both sectional and partisan. The most solid bloc is that made up of Democrats from the intervention-minded south, who virtually to a man will support the bill in any form.

The Republicans, on the other hand, are almost solidly opposed to it with the exception of scattered defections, mainly from the

CIO Workers Ask U.S. To Take Kearny Yards

KEARNY, N. J., Aug. 9.—The U. S. government today had before it a request of 17,000 CIO shipbuilding strikers who walked out of their jobs at the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Thursday to take over the yards and "operate them in the interests of National Defense."

The request was contained in a statement issued by Peter Flynn, vice-president of Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, which said:

"Local 16 calls on the United States government to take over the Federal shipbuilding yards and operate them in the interests of National Defense."

ACTRESS SAFE AFTER HER CAR GOES OVER BANK

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 9.—Film Star Martha Raye narrowly escaped death or serious injuries late last night when her automobile plunged off a canyon road and hurled down a 150-foot embankment, police disclosed today.

X-rays showed Miss Raye suffered no broken bones. Neal Lang, the actress' husband, said she received a sprained ankle, but will be able to report at her studio for work on Monday.

Investigating officers said the actress was en route to her mother's home when she swerved to avoid an oncoming car on a curve and plunged off the road. Miss Raye was alone in the machine.

LOVE'S FUNNY THING; FEW DRINKS LEAD TO ASSAULT WITH HAMMER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Magistrate Charles Solomon believed today he had heard just about everything.

Elsie Cortez, 28-year-old model, appeared before the magistrate and sought to withdraw a felonious assault charge against Charles Henry, 33.

"I love him, your honor," she said, "and I know that he didn't mean to hit me with the hammer. He was mad at me, that's the truth."

The puzzled judge asked how Henry had got the hammer. "He took it from me," she replied. "I got mad while we were having a few drinks and started breaking up his furniture. He hit me on the back of the head, but he didn't mean it."

They told the judge they were thinking of being married.

As the couple walked out, pending a grand jury hearing of Henry on August 14, the magistrate said:

"Love is very strange."

SENATE TO VOTE BIG INCREASE IN HOUSE TAX ACT

Chairman George Declares Solons Considering Several Plans

THREE BILLIONS NEEDED

Change In Income Base, Boost In Surtax Bracket Likely

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Sen. George (D) Ga., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, predicted today that it will comply with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's request to increase the yield of the House-passed tax bill to at least $3,500,000,000.

George said that although a general program to form the basis for the proposed increase is yet to be worked out it will probably be brought about through broadening the income tax base, increasing the surtax bracket and revising or readjusting other levies.

"We will go up to $3,500,000,000 and perhaps a little bit beyond that figure if it can be done while still preserving the economic system," George said.

"I think," he added, "that some program will be worked out that will carry out in principle at least most of the recommendations of the secretary of the treasury, although there will probably be some differences of opinion."

Fought in Committee

George said however that he does not favor the treasury recommendations to increase the five percent surtax bracket approved by the House to 11 percent, and predicted that it will meet strong opposition in the committee.

"I think that the increase in the surtax bracket to 11 percent would be exceedingly high," George said, "and it seems questionable to me that the committee would go that far."

The Georgia senator said that the committee would accept President Roosevelt's proposal that new exemptions in the

FUTURE ACTIONS BY JAPS DECIDE COURSE OF U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The United States government, it was learned today, plans strict enforcement of the present drastic economic sanctions against Japan as long as there is reason to believe the Nippon Empire contemplates further aggressive action in the Far East, especially against Thailand.

No licenses are being granted by the government to facilitate the importation of Japanese silk into this country, and it is understood that few, if any, are likely to be granted unless there is a lessening of tension in the Pacific.

If Japan gives evidence of abandoning what are believed to be its designs on Thailand, and refrains from further aggressive action in the Pacific, this government, informed quarters indicated, will be willing to consider relaxation of the present economic sanctions and a gradual resumption of "peace-time" trade with the Nippon Empire.

Although trade between the United States and Japan remains virtually at a standstill, the American government has not yet clamped down a complete economic embargo. Shipment of crude petroleum products to Japan still is permitted on a pre-war quota basis and the Japanese are being granted liberal access to Philippine products.

F. B. I. STUDYING BIG INCREASE IN BLAST ON SHIP FILLED WITH OIL PILOTS ASSURED

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—Half-submerged, the huge oil tanker, M. V. Transiter, smoldered in the River Rouge today as Federal Bureau of Investigation agents pressed a probe of possible sabotage in the explosion which burned the vessel and reportedly killed two persons, one the wife of the captain.

The Transiter, loaded with 700,000 gallons of high test gasoline, destined for Canadian stations of the Austin Oil Company, exploded three-quarters of a mile from the Ford Motor Company's Rouge plant last night.

The crewless ship drifted menacingly downstream, tall flames threatening gasoline tanks along the river banks. It moved under drawbridges and bumped against docks of the American Chemical Co., where flames destroyed fences and several sheds.

Powerful streams of water from fire tugs finally forced the boat into shallow water where it grounded.

The ship is owned by the Transiter Tankers Terminal Ltd., of Montreal.

Believed dead were Mrs. Alda Trembley, 43, of Murray Bay, Que., wife of Captain Rodolphe Trembley, and Roger Frechette, 20-year-old deck hand from Drummondville, Que. Fifteen other persons saved themselves by leaping from the flaming ship and swimming to shore.

Wayne County Prosecutor William E. Dowling said several crew members believed the blast was caused by the hot sun increasing pressure inside the vessel's gas tanks.

They found that the order was quoted at $3.40 a pair, whereas previously the purchase price was $3.38.

The increase "is directly attributable to the larger quantities of leather needed to make larger shoes," an OPM spokesman said.

It appears that shoe firms have been doing some checking, too, and have discovered that the feet of soldiers and seelctees in America's 1941 army average a size larger than they did when the doughboys marched in 1918.

They tell you that "medium" size today is 10, whereas in 1918 it was nine.

OPM officials admit that most of the shoes in the 1,000,000 order were 10s. An increase of two cents per pair boosts the bill on the shipment $20,000.

HEAVY FIGHTING GOES ON

Moscow Parodies Claims Of Foes Concerning Big Advantages

MOSCOW, Aug. 9.—While fierce fighting raged along the entire front, Red air force bombers attacked Berlin for the second time in succession last night and early today.

An official communique stated:

"Fighting continued last night in the directions of Kexholm, Smolensk, Korosten, Byelaya-Tserkov and in the Estonian sector."

Information in Moscow stated the Russian bombers bombed military objectives in the vicinity of the German capital.

(Editor's Note: An official Berlin announcement said "enemy" planes raided northwestern and northern Germany and that a few headed for Berlin, but were forced to turn back by heavy anti-aircraft fire. The German statement said no damage was caused and that four raiders were shot down.)

(A German radio broadcast picked up in London said the nationality of the planes that attacked Berlin was not known.)

A previous Russian announcement stated Soviet planes raided Berlin Thursday night, dropping a number of incendiary bombs on the city and all returning safely to their bases.

According to the Moscow radio, military targets in several Berlin districts were attacked by the Russian bombers and a number of fires and explosions were observed.

The Daily Mail, in a Stockholm dispatch, said it was understood the Russian pilots and bombardiers were supplied with copies of RAF photographs of Berlin's principal military objectives.)

Meanwhile, the Russian high command communique told of fierce fighting on the fronts covering Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev. It said:

VITAL QUESTIONS BEING TALKED BY FRENCH CABINET

VICHY, Aug. 9.—Momentous decisions affecting France's African colonial empire and the extent of the Vichy government's collaboration with Germany today were expected within a few hours as the cabinet prepared to meet with Marshal Henri Philippe Petain.

Admiral Jean Darlan, vice-premier and considered a proponent of closer collaboration, was back in Vichy after a visit to Paris where he held a series of talks with German authorities.

From North Africa came General Maxime Weygand, military governor of France's colonies on the southern continent. Flying up from Africa yesterday, he rushed to a hurried conference with Marshal Petain.

Earlier this week, Admiral Darlan, by official decree, was placed in complete charge of African colonial policy. Heretofore, Gen. (Continued on Page Eight)

Don't look now, you leaders in the American Association, but you're being followed—and closely.
Although still down in the lower bracket, the hottest team in the loop today is the Toledo outfit.
The Mudhens last night exploded 18 hits in the faces of three alleged pitchers for hapless, cellar-dwelling Milwaukee, and pranced off with a 17 to 3 victory—their eighth in their last ten games. They played air-tight ball afield. And Johnny Marcum, their stellar hurler, did a sweet job of scattering seven bingles, as well as poling out three for five, including a double, himself.

10 MARKSMEN HIT PERFECT SCORES IN SKEET SHOOT

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—Ten marksmen with perfect scores for their first 100 targets led the way today in the 250-target world's skeet shooting championships. A record-breaking field of more than 300 gunners was entered in the event.
The ten perfect gunners were Paul Slack, Detroit; H. A. Montgomery, Decatur, Ill.; C. H. Poulton, San Antonio, Tex.; Jerry Decker, Detroit; Dick Shaughnessy, Dedham, Mass.; George Deyoe, Washington; Alex Kerr, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Bob Parker, Tulsa, Okla.; L. R. Ford, Indianapolis; and W. W. Rapley, Washington.
Shaughnessy is the present holder of the national title. Another 100 targets were to be run off today, and the final 50 will be shot tomorrow.
The Westbrook Cardinals of New York, including Shaughnessy, S. L. Hutcheson of Greenwich, Conn., W. R. Ragsdale of Boston, Dave Sklar of Brooklyn and Ed Garland of Belleville, N. J., led for five-man team honors, with a score of 495 out of a possible 500.

Man of Week Honors Go to Frankie Frisch

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
The Pittsburgh Pirates are managed by one of the most fiery bolts of humanity that ever pulled on a spiked shoe.
At the outset of the current campaign, this dynamic little guy predicted he had the makings of a fine ball club. Few believed him. The Pirates, even as late as May, seemed hopelessly floundering in last place of the National League. Prospects that they would emerge from second division were next to none.

Their manager was not the kind to give up, and neither were his players; so, the team then started the dizzy victory march of the season, and now they are in third place and within hailing distance of the pacemaking St. Louis and Brooklyn teams.
The answer to Pittsburgh's phenomenal upward surge — if any one name can be given as the answer — is Frankie Frisch.
Since the Pirates are continuing their rollicking pace toward the pennant heights, International News Service today selected manager Frisch as the man of the week in sports.

Frisch is a National Leaguer of the so-called old school. He flashed himself off Fordham University's campus to the Polo Grounds and immediately became a fighting fixture on the late John McGraw's Giants. Fresh from Fordham, where he starred in both the football and baseball, Frankie became one of the few collegians to bridge the athletic chasm between a campus and the major leagues.
The year was 1919, and from then until 1928 Frisch was an infield bulwark for the giants.
He was traded to St. Louis for the next season in a deal that brought Rogers Hornsby to New York.
Frisch was voted the National League's most valuable player in 1931 when he helped the Cardinals win the pennant, and two years later he was appointed manager of the Red Birds. It was the time of the Gas House gang, as the Cardinals were dubbed; and Frankie Frisch became a guiding spirit of modern-day rough house on the diamond. The Cards battled for every run and every out, and Frisch helped them even to the extent of winning a reputation as an umpire baiter of 1.0 moral ability.

In 1938, his last season as skipper of the Cardinals, Frisch retired as an active player, leaving behind a 19-year Major League batting average of .316. Subsequently, he became boss of the Buccaneers, and apparently is well on the way to a successful regime after two lean seasons in smoke town.

It was the second straight year Warren lost in the finals.
The Trumbull County boys reached the finals by drubbing Lima, 10 to 3, in a morning contest. Letho, who also started the final tilt for Warren, struck out 16 Lima batters and allowed only six hits.
Cincinnati's only defeat in the double-elimination tourney was by Lima, and was avenged the next day in a return engagement.

HEROES AND GOATS

Heroes: Babe Young, Giants, whose 11th inning homer beat Phils. Whitlow Wyatt, Dodgers, who held Braves to six hits. Paul Erickson, Cubs, who blanked Pirates with one hit. Taft Wright, White Sox, who hit two homers against Browns. Bob Johnson, A's, whose three run homer paced teammates to victory over Yankees.
GOATS: Merrill May, Phils, whose error forced Phils into extra innings and defeat. Steve Sundra, Senators, slaughtered by Red Sox in less than one inning.

NOVA'S MANAGER SAYS JOE CAN'T DEFEAT BIG LOU

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—With the top price tickets slated to go at $30 a copy and Joe Louis generally regarded as having hit the pugilistic toboggan, there is one man at large who is ready to wager on a gate "upwards of $700,000" when the champion makes his 19 defense of the heavyweight title against Lou Nova in New York on September 19. That man is Ray Carlen, manager of the challenger and confirmed optimist. He also is in thorough agreement with those who figure Louis is ready for a trip to the laundry against Nova.

"Everybody wants to be there when the champion is beaten," Carlen said today, "and the great showing that Billy Conn made against Louis plus Nova's assets as a puncher, a game guy and one who can take it will make this the biggest fight in many months."
Louis is really jeopardizing the title this time, Carlen went on to say, because of his fighter's strength and weight, among other things, and the Conn fight set the thing up just right. Conn did as well as he did without the strength, weight or build of a heavyweight and without any punch, and there you have the answer to the appeal of the forthcoming match.

Carlen declined to discuss the payoff agreed on, but the understanding is that shortly after he and Nova leave the Yankee Stadium as champion or just another mangled challenger they will receive 17½ percent of the net. The champion's end thus would be 42½ percent.
Louis definitely has selected Greenwood Lake, N. Y., up a winding road through the mountains, as his training camp again, and will arrive here August 22. Nova will arrive next week to pick a camp.

GRIDIRON ACE'S BIRTH RECORD BALKS SERVICE

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 9 — Nello Falaschi, former Santa Clara Broncho football star, will be back in the New York Giants pro football lineup this fall — an older and wiser man.
He registered for the draft as 27 years old, and was classified immediately available for selective service. But Nello's mother today produced baptismal records proving he was born at Los Banos, Calif., in 1913, making his present age 28.
Draft board officials were notified of the football players' correct age and promptly deferred him.
Twenty-eight was Falaschi's football number at Santa Clara.

CHICAGO ROOKIE GIVES LONE HIT

Paul Erickson Baffles Pirates; Wyatt Puts Dodgers In Lead

By Pat Robinson
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Until today the only thing we knew about Paul "Swede" Erickson (spelled with one R) was that he was not to be confused with Richard Merriwell Erickson (spelled with two R's).
Now, however, Paul "Swede" Erickson is a name we are not likely to forget. Nor are the Pirates likely to forget him. For it was he who pitched a one-hit 1-0 victory over them for the Cubs yesterday, snapped their winning streak at six games and dropped them 8½ games back of the league-leading Dodgers.
That was Swede's first Major League victory and judging by the way he mowed down the hard-hitting Pirates it certainly won't be his last.
Offhand, we can't seem to recall any pitcher whose maiden Major League victory was more sensational and, only for Bob Elliott's harmless single in the seventh, this 23 year old right hander would be in baseball's hall of fame.
This big fellow—he's six-feet-two and scales 200—hails from Zion, Ill. He has had four years in the minors. Two at Ponca City, one at St. Joseph where he was strike-out king of the Western Association and last year at Tulsa where he picked up a few tips from Dizzy Dean.
His chief stock in trade is said to be speed. And let's see—wasn't that the same commodity that brought fame to Walter Johnson, Pete Alexander, Smokey Joe Wood, Bullet Joe Bush, Lefty Grove, Dizzy Dean, Dazzy Vance and Bob Feller?

Wyatt Winner

Speed and a little control can carry a youngster far in baseball and young Erickson (with one R) seems to have both. That is the same combination Whitlow Wyatt used yesterday in scoring his 15th victory at the expense of Jim Tobin of the Braves. Wyatt gave only six hits and breezed in, 6 to 2. That made seven in a row for the Dodgers and moved them back into the lead over the idle Cardinals who today must start an all-important series with the rampant Pirates.
Meanwhile the Giants were traveling 11 innings to beat the lowly Phils, 3-2, in a game they should have lost 2-1 in regulation innings. Bill Lohman went the route for the Giants and was returned a winner over Cy Blanton when Babe Young opened the 11th with his 15th homer. An error by Merrill may have given the game into overtime.
The slaughter of pitching innocents was terrific in the other circuit where the Red Sox hammered out a 15-8 decision over the Senators and where the White Sox took off on the Browns to win, 16 to 2, in a game in which Taft Wright collected two homers and George Dickey one, the three blows being good for eight runs.
And in a night game at Philadelphia, the Athletics defeated the Yankees 5 to 3 after garnering four runs in a fifth inning rally which included Bob Johnson's homer with two men on base. Charley Keller was the Yankee battering hero with three doubles and a single in four times at bat.

ALSAB FAVORED TO FINISH FIRST IN CHICAGO RACE

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Alsab, who as a yearling was bought by Mrs. Albert Sabath for only $700 and who to date has won $33,095, was a heavy favorite to win the $2,500 Juvenile Stakes at Washington Park today.
Alsab, carrying an impost of 126 pounds, was pitted against such youngsters as Sweep Singer, Zig Zag, Emoument, K. Dorko, Memphis, Bright Willie, At Liberty and Valinda Orphan.
Mrs. Sabath's sensational colt cleaned up with ease in the only two stakes in which he competed at Arlington Park — the Primer and the Hyde Park.
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 9.—Led by a 17-year-old star, a Hawaiian team from Alexander Community House at Maui today held a long lead in the race for team honors at the National Outdoor A.A.U. men's swimming championships.
In three events last night, the Hawaiians captured all the major point-winning places except first place in the 300-meter medley relay event, which was won by the Chicago Towers Team of Adolph Kiefer, George Lowe and Otto Jaretz.
Kiefer, Lowe and Jaretz were defending champions in the medley, and they negotiated the distance in the fast time of 3:29.1. The Hawaiians were second, the Olympic Club of San Francisco was third, and the Pasadena Athletic Club placed fourth.
The championship event will conclude tomorrow. At the close of last night's events, the point totals were:
Alexander House, Hawaii..... 24
Towers Club, Chicago..... 13
Ohio State University..... 5
Olympic Club, S. Francisco..... 3
Bill Smith, 17, swam the 200-meter free style in 2:16.1 to take first place, and his Hawaiian teammates, Takashi Hirose and Paul Herron, placed second and third.
Possurns, it seems, don't "play possum". Their behavior is a faint, not a feint.

Date for Young People's Meeting At Camp Ground Is Drawing Near

Delegates From Over
State To Gather
August 19

Plans for opening the twenty-fourth annual Church of Christ camp meeting with the Young People's State Rally on Tuesday, August 19, have been completed. Speaker at the rally, to be held on the Mount of Praise Camp Ground, will be the Rev. Paul Thomas of Indianapolis, Ind.

The young people's rally annually attracts thousands of young people from all parts of the state. Last year the program was moved to the large tabernacle on the grounds when the Young People's building failed to provide adequate space.

Following the young people's rally will be the annual council of the Churches of Christ in Christian Union of Ohio. The council will open Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 p. m., the devotional services being directed by the Rev. T. N. Kerr. The Rev. E. A. Keaton of Chillicothe will deliver the Moderator's address. During the afternoon committees will be appointed to serve during the camp meeting. The first day's program will close with a public preaching service at 8 p. m., the Rev. W. L. Cozad of Lancaster delivering the address.

The council session will continue Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, closing Saturday evening at 8 o'clock with public preaching. A young people's hour and ring meeting directed by the Rev. Rufus Rinehart and a song service directed by E. Clay Milby will feature the closing program.

Since Monday camp ground officials have been busy clearing the camp grounds for the opening of the meeting. Food supplies are being stocked in the camp ground dining hall. Cottages are being repaired and the tabernacle cleaned and made ready for a crowd which church officials estimate will be the largest ever to attend.

Benches are being constructed outside the tabernacle to accommodate the crowds. Evangelists will be the Rev. T. M. Anderson, the Rev. Bona Fleming, the Rev. John Church; E. Clay Milby, song evangelist and the Rev. Edna Leonard, children's worker.

BAPTIST CHURCH UNIT TO GATHER HERE AUG. 15-17

Scioto Association of Primitive Baptist Churches in central Ohio will meet at the Walnut Township School building Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 15, 16 and 17, for its 137th annual program.

Friday morning's session will be at 10 o'clock, Elder G. F. Hanover of near Ashville serving as moderator. After an introductory sermon, letters from each of the ten member churches will be read. Preaching services will be held each morning and afternoon session thereafter; morning at 9:30 afternoon at 1:30.

Ministers are expected from each of the four other Primitive Baptist Associations in Ohio, and from Michigan and Indiana.

The Council body will convene Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. The present clerk is O. W. Cory of Frankfort, who has served in that office for several years. Officers will be chosen during the Friday afternoon Council meeting.

The Turkey Run Baptist Church near Cedar Hill will be host.

James Teaches Christian Living

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—The Epistle of James

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God . . . and it shall be given him. . . . But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering, said St. James.

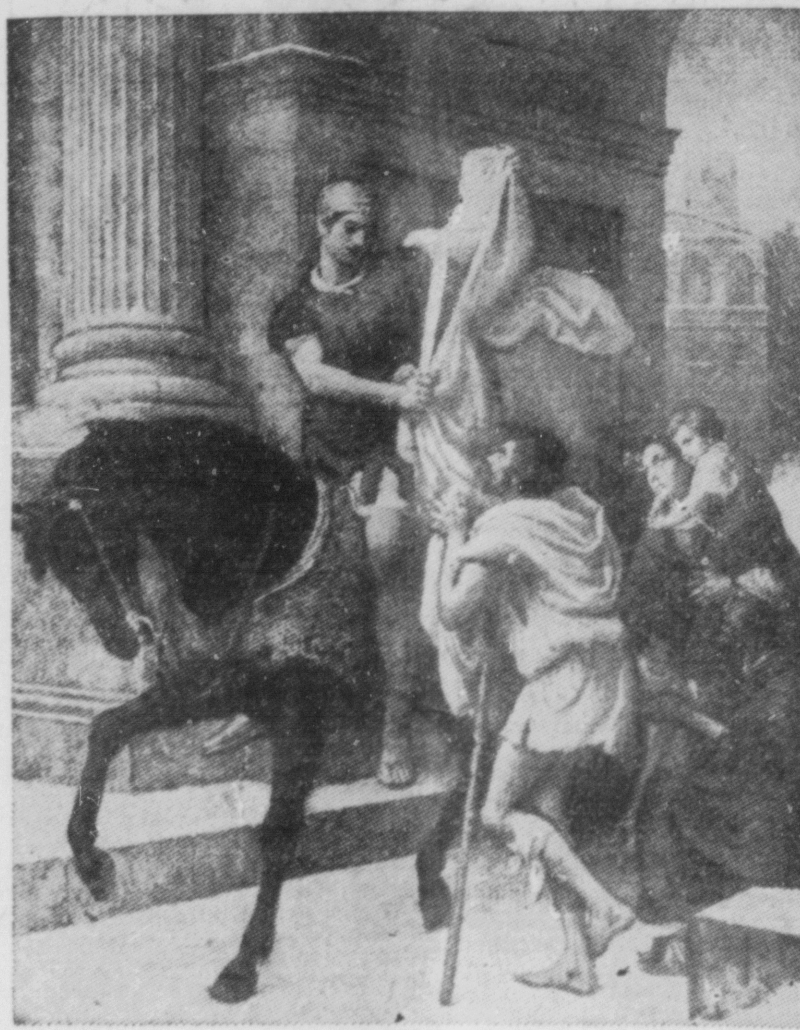

Blessed is the man who endureth temptation: for he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him.

Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, for a hearer is like a man beholding his face in a glass, who forgets what manner of man he was.

Pure religion and undefiled is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world. (Golden Text—James 1:27.)

Consistent Christian Living Taught

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Newman Campbell

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for August 10 is the Epistle of James, the Golden Text being James 1:27, "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world.")

IF YOU were to take one single book from the Bible as your guide for Christian living, you could do no better than to use the book of James. It contains only five chapters, but in it are all the necessary rules for living the good life.

There is a disagreement among Bible students as to the author's identity. Many think this James is the brother of Jesus, and certain it is that his message is very like that of Jesus. It is the Sermon on the Mount in a little different guise. It is thought the epistle was written earlier than that of St. Paul, or the Acts, around A. D. 51, and possibly earlier.

It is directed to the "twelve tribes which are scattered abroad," meaning the Jewish Christians, not the Gentiles. St. James says in the beginning of his epistle that a Christian should be glad when he is assailed by temptation, for temptation tries his faith, which works for patience, or we might say that by resisting temptation he gains strength.

When We Lack Wisdom

Are we troubled as to our problems? Do we lack wisdom? Let us ask God for help, having faith that He will show us the right way.

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh from the Father of Lights, with whom there is no variable shadow of turning." That is a verse to memorize and repeat when your hearts are troubled, is it not?

"Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." Swift to hear, alert, but slow to speak for fear he say the wrong thing in anger, when if he reflected a moment he would keep still.

Listen attentively to those who would instruct you, read earnestly of the good book, but "be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, . . . for if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like a man (or woman) who looks in the mirror, but when he walks away, he cannot remember what he looked like.

"If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." For, "pure religion and undefiled before God the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Good deeds and self-control show the faith that is in us much more than perfect church attendance and unchristian conduct all the rest of the week.

Next St. James attacks the person who bows down obsequiously before the rich man, but slight the poor. Rich men are not necessarily evil, of course. They may be as good as those who are poor. But they should not be given undue privileges merely because they are wealthy. And James reminds his readers that there are rich men who oppress and cheat the poor.

"If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well."

Sympathy Not Enough

Again, it is not enough to be sympathetic to those poorer than yourselves, those who are in want. To say to those in need, "Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled," without giving them the things that they need will not profit us. "Even so, faith, if it hath not works, is dead."

Abraham had faith, he reminds us, but when the time came, he was willing even to sacrifice his own son, to show that "faith wrought with his works."

In chapter three he speaks of the power of the tongue for evil. He reminds us that we put bits into horses' mouths and guide these large beasts by the small bit. Great ships, too, are guided and turned by a small helm. The tongue is a little bit of the body, yet what trouble it can make for us! Every kind of beast has been tamed by man, but his own tongue, few men can tame.

"Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be." "Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom."

"Bitter envying and strife in your hearts" are the cause of wars, says James. "Ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain; ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not."

Isn't that true? "For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work."

"But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceful, gentle and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

"And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."

One of the largest cakes ever baked was ordered by Frederick William I of Prussia in 1730. It contained 36 bushels of flour, 200 gallons of milk, one ton of butter, one ton of yeast and 5,000 eggs. The amount of sugar is not mentioned. When finished it was 18 yards long, 8 yards wide and more than one-half yard thick, and 30,000 soldiers could not eat it all.

RUSSIA AND POLAND

RUSSIA, which for so long seemed dull and stupid to the rest of the world, is proving herself smart. One of her better and more intelligent moves was that to ally herself with Poland, to give back to the Poles the territory which she took over when the Nazis moved in and took the other half, and to get the Poles, those fierce and determined fighters for freedom, lined up on her side.

The little nations which have been sitting passively in the Nazi path, hoping they wouldn't be taken for the next bite, willing to fight as well as they could against the Nazi machine, but knowing themselves comparatively helpless, were in a bad way themselves, and they offered Hitler a chance to pick up a little oil and food as he went along. They were not valuable assets to the free cause and were only too much in danger of becoming liabilities.

Russia apparently decided that Poland would be better off both for itself and as a possible asset to Russia if its land were restored. It is not likely that the motives of Russia were purely altruistic. But the effect is that of assistance to the Allies.

The bear, during the last few years, seems to have been merely hibernating. Now that it is awake and showing itself ready to fight for its honey, its forepaws might close around the Nazi armies in a deadly grip.

SAVING GAS

THE commerce department gives ten suggestions for saving gas. They are useful rules at any time, but especially now, when every gallon is so badly needed in the fight for freedom. Here they are:

Avoid racing the engine.

Use first and second gear no longer than necessary.

Maintain a fair operating speed of not more than forty miles per hour.

Avoid rapid acceleration and deceleration, "Jackrabbit" starts and too rapid stops.

Shut off motor while waiting, making calls or deliveries.

Plan travel so that one car can serve more than one person going in the same direction.

Do not make individual trips for various activities when the objects of the travel may be correlated and covered in one circular trip.

Have carburetors and ignition checked frequently and wheel and lubrication as well.

Maintain tire pressures at 5 to 10 per-

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

BRASS RING TO S. BECHHOLD

WASHINGTON—The scene is a conference room in the War Department. Seated round a long table are a group of generals and manufacturers — British as well as American. In front of each is a microphone, but the discussion is not being broadcast to a listening world. It is strictly confidential, with each detail transcribed on a wax recording and filed so there shall be no mistake about the promises being made to the United States or Britain.

At the head of the table is a slight, mild-mannered man with thinning grey hair, General G. M. Barnes of the Ordnance Corps. Seated near him are Ed Hunt of Chrysler, H. B. Ensign of American Car and Foundry, Charles Wright of Pullman Standard, H. S. Colby of Baldwin Locomotive, S. Bechhold of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and several others.

This is the Tank Committee. And to the men around this table has recently come word that President Roosevelt demands more tanks, and in a hurry.

Already the members of the Tank Committee and their factories have 4,700 light and medium tanks on order and are turning them out at the rate of 300 a month. In addition to the American orders, this group has a British order for $200,000,000 worth of medium tanks.

However, Germany has a reserve alone of 6,500 tanks. And with every battle on the Russian front showing the ever increasing importance of the tank, Roosevelt has now written identical letters to Secretary of War Stimson and OPM bosses Knudsen and Hillman, demanding that tank production be rushed full speed.

BRITISH NEED TANKS

LACK of tanks, it has now leaked out, is why the British have not been able to land an invading force on the European continent. Also it is why the British could not continue the offensive in Libya.

The companies represented by the gentlemen seated around the table of the Tank Committee have done an excellent job of producing tanks. They are turning them out more quickly than the Army expected. But even so, when they reach full production they will only produce about 800 tanks a month.

At this rate, which will not be reached for another year, it will take two years to match the reserves accumulated by Hitler.

Therefore, the chief question facing the OPM and American industry is to spread out tank production among other factories: first, by letting smaller firms make tank parts on sub-contract; second, by drafting a great many other factories now

cent above manufacturers' recommendations.

Avoid spilling gasoline and the filling of the tanks to within more than one gallon of capacity.

Americans are happy to salute this venerable publication and wish it well as it starts its second hundred years.

Uncle Sam is reaching out not to pull that war closer to us, but to push it off.

War Jitters May Bring on Stomach Troubles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

War jitters seem to have penetrated into every field of human activity. They certainly seem to have reached the doctors if the reports I receive from various medical meetings can be trusted.

One of these states that war jitters have increased constipation, and another says they have increased diarrhoea. One says they have increased the acid in the stomach causing stomach ulcers, and another that they have dried up all the acid in a lot of people's stomachs causing atonic dyspepsia.

Maybe all four are right. The stomach is a funny thing; and then there were the blind men and the elephant. One of them was right, and the other was right when he got hold of the trunk and concluded the elephant is like a snake.

Stomach Ulcer

The reports to which I refer started when it was stated that among the men who came through the hell of Dunkirk there was 300 per cent more stomach ulcer than in the rest of the population. But the rest of the population suffered also and there has been a great increase in stomach complaints among the civilian population of London. This is attributed to hasty eating, irregular hours, nervousness, or war jitters, and coarse food.

Constipation too, the type known as spastic, where the bowel is supposed to get tied up in hard knots, is reported as the result of the war. Well, constipation of some type was here before the war. I have never subscribed very much to the idea of the spastic type of constipation. I always thought when the bowels got tied up in hard knots they went into diarrhoea, so I am likely to subscribe to the fellow who thinks the war has caused a lot of functional diarrhoea.

The reports on the occurrence of

peptic ulcer from war jitters say that this causes a great outflow of acid and the acid eats the ulcer in the stomach. Well now, we certainly do not know the cause of ulcer. Plenty of people have increased having ulcer, and coarse food and irregular eating habits do not cause it, because it is commoner in those who are dainty in their food habits and like processed food, than it is in those who live on coarse food and have to take it at irregular intervals.

The explanation probably is that the stomach is the most emotional and temperamental organ in the body except maybe the intestines. And it is no wonder the war and the present situation have everybody tied up in hard knots. If possible cultivate a philosophy—plenty of philosophy. Protect your poor old jittery stomach by not taking the war too hard. They say nothing is as bad as it seems. Maybe that even includes the war.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sufferer: "Please publish an article on Tie Douloureux. Is surgery the only cure?"

Answer: Trifacial neuralgia, or tie douloureux, is a very crippling and painful affliction. No one thing is certain to cure. Some cases respond to one thing and some to another. When very severe surgery is recommended.

M. S.: "Is cottonseed oil beneficial for use in colitis? If so, do you take it inwardly or by enema?"

Answer: If the colitis is not ulcerative colitis, cottonseed oil 3 ounces at night as a retention enema is helpful, but remember the enema habit is as bad as the cathartic habit. So do not get into the habit of using enemas.

CHAPTER TWENTY

NONE of the disappointment Ylena felt at learning that Brodie, the hatchet-faced foreman, was to be their driver, showed on her face. It was serene as she gazed at Scott. He looked bronzed and handsome in Levis and a hand-stitched blue cowboy shirt. Definitely the broad-shouldered, stalwart westerner. No wonder the women flocked about him! Unbelievably, Ylena found herself resenting their interest, then quickly forced aside that twinge of jealousy and climbed into the station wagon.

Back in La Madera the hospitable Aunt Daisy spouted insistent invitations, but the girl refused. She took her car out of Aunt Daisy's garage and again went to the Alvarez hotel. As she had on her first day in that little city, she stood in her room looking out over traffic, business buildings, ranch houses, desert hills. Here I am, she thought, exactly where I started. Actually, I'm no nearer having Carlyle. I'm all alone. And I haven't a home. Then she corrected herself. No, not exactly where I started, because now I do have friends and money.

In the advertising section of the paper slipped beneath her door the following morning, Ylena noticed the description of a shop which she felt sure would suit her needs. Included in a lengthy list of rentals it was headed by the names, Cromwell and Cromwell. She lifted the receiver and asked to be connected with that real estate firm, then as quickly changed her mind and requested breakfast.

To the waiter who brought her tray she gave a dollar tip and instructions.

A moment later he turned from the telephone to report: $3,500 a year. Helpfully he added: "It sounds like that place on the corner of Alvarado and Main boulevard. I know it's empty and it has an apartment above. It's a grand location, lady." He gave a chuckle. "You know how old man Cromwell is. I practically had to hang up on him to keep from giving my name."

Ylena thanked him. "Don't mention it to anyone." "I should say not. And thank YOU!"

Two or three hours later Ylena herself called the Cromwells, asking for Mr. Cromwell, Sr. Finally able to stop his hilarious bubbling, she said, "I've got some more money. Do you want it?"

He said, "Of course I want it, child. Do you think I'm crazy? I'll send someone right out to get it." "Send them to the Alvarez hotel."

"The Alvarez?" he shouted. "Yeh! That reminds me. I thought we were going to sell that ranch for you. Then about the time I get a prospect here comes the report that you've sold."

"I had a lucky break." She laughed. "But I'm giving you another chance to skin me, so what are you fussing about? Have a salesman here at 3 o'clock." Let it be Tate or let it not be. She did not care.

In between time Ylena went to a specialty shop and was outfitted in a new sport dress of beige flannel with a hand-knit sweater of green. To guard her eyes from the hot, winter afternoon desert sun, she picked out wide-rimmed dark glasses and then, just because she felt like it, she added a crazy, three-strand necklace of fat pinto beans that tied about her neck with a little green suede bow. Then she went to the hotel to await her appointment. As she stepped from the hotel elevator in answer to the operator's announcement, she was flabbergasted. The man waiting directly beside the clerk's desk was a decidedly uncomfortable Percy O'Neill. When the girl saw him she made a dead stop, then progressed slowly.

Her eyes were narrowed and she led him away from the vicinity of the curious clerk. "Don't tell me you're the salesman? I'm not so sure I want to go with you."

Percy's fat face flushed. "I'm no more pleased about it than you. But what can you do when—?"

Ylena interrupted rudely. "When Pop Cromwell says, 'Get to work!' So you're in business." She grinned like a street urchin and continued her insolence. "Sometime when I have a free week I'd love to hear about your selling the Grand Canyon. I'm sure you've turned a number of big deals like that. Since you're so displeased about showing me around, I've decided to go after all. I'll probably enjoy myself."

Percy looked at her. This was not the quiet Ylena of that Sunday dinner. "My car is out front," he gruffly offered.

"Oh," she said with meaning when they reached the curved entrance at the side of the hotel. "Tate's car. I'm not going to ride in Tate's car. Frankie might not like it. We'll go in mine." Not giving him a chance to protest, she led the way to her own machine, parked across the street. She slid behind the wheel and pressed the button that let down the top.

"I think I'll ask you to excuse me," Percy stood, foot on the running board.

Ylena kept right on snapping the clamps that held down the folded top. "I have a $3,500 check in my purse, already made out to Cromwell and Cromwell. And it's a good one." She shook her head at O'Neill, who was puffing with fury. "You know perfectly well Pop Cromwell won't like it if I call and tell him you were rude to me." She slid behind the wheel.

Percy crawled in beside her, holding himself stiffly erect. "What sort of place do you want?" he asked curtly.

She gave an airy retort. "I don't know. You direct me. Show me what you have and I'll decide."

As they rode along crowded streets, they attracted a great deal of attention. That staring-eyed, neck-craneing sort it pleased Ylena and cast a lasting, ruddy glow over Percy.

Ylena smiled as he restlessly moved about. She told him in a pleasant voice, "People will be gossiping about you as much as you did about me."

He ignored her insinuation and barked orders to stop. They looked at the first house. Ylena didn't like it. They looked at a second. She didn't like it either. In answer to her dictatorial commands, for approximately two hours, he showed her first one place, then another. With all she found frank and instantaneous fault; her manner implied that Percy was personally responsible for such atrocities.

Percy O'Neill snapped, "What do you expect for $3,500?"

"Oh, not a hacienda like Mr. Cromwell's where you live. Even so this check doesn't have to pay the total. It could go as a down payment on something a little better than a cowshed."

They were passing a series of Mexican adobe houses, a half block continuous chain of empty, deserted, dismal shacks. A large wooden Cromwell and Cromwell sign was nailed on a corner.

"My, the firm must be proud of that property."

Percy frowned. "That eyesore is the bane of the Cromwells' life. They've cut the price to practically nothing and still can't get rid of it. How I'd like to poke off that blot on some unsuspecting soul. I'd be the fair-haired boy—hey," he cautioned suddenly, "you'd better start slowing up. The high school and junior college are near here and the traffic cops are strict."

"We mustn't be thrown into jail. There'd be such a scandal, wouldn't there?" Obligingly the girl slowed to the required 15 miles per hour as they passed the little village of school buildings. "You'd better show me something else, Mr. O'Neill. So far, I don't like anything."

For another hour Percy responded to her dictatorial wishes. He was perspiring from rage and exertion. "Miss Varanoff," he finally shouted, "are you sure you want a house?"

"No," she answered calmly, "I don't want one."

He exploded. "Then what's the idea of having me waste an entire afternoon?"

"You once put me through one of the most uncomfortable afternoons of my life. I only hope you've been half so uncomfortable."

"I can assure you I have," he snapped.

"Good! Let me warn you, Percy, not to try to hurt me again, because I've built such a defense against being hurt that it really wouldn't give you much pleasure."

"If you've finished, I'll get back to the office."

"Not get. You haven't wasted your afternoon. You'll get this check yet." She reached into her purse and took out the check, also a newspaper clipping. "This is what I'm really interested in." She pointed to the pencil-encircled advertisement. "Where is this shop?"

"On the corner of Main boulevard and Alvarado road. And I can tell you right now that $3,500 will not get it."

Today's Garden-Graph

Specimen Tomatoes In Small Areas

The home gardener who has only a small area to devote to tomatoes will get better results if the plants are supported by stakes rather than allowed to roam over the ground. The fruits will be larger, of a better color and will develop earlier.

Tomatoes should be pruned as they grow. Some gardeners prefer to train them to a single main stem while others prefer leaving two, three or even four of the strongest bottom branches to develop.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, keep the suckers pruned out, taking care not to break off the flowering stems which appear just at the base of the side shoots.

Tomatoes require lots of water and after obtaining considerable growth respond rapidly to feedings of manure water or applications of nitrate of soda, using a teaspoonful to a plant.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Fall Gardens

I see a few of them in southern Ohio and they are doing very well. We should have them at every farm home. Then they have a place in the city home, where some gardening is done for the family.

Beautiful Picture

The dim outline of distant hills in Ross County covered with a thin veil of lacy fog is a picture that I slowed down the car to admire. There will be many such pictures in the corn belt, as the season changes from summer to fall, with the gorgeous array of colors, present on every landscape as the leaves ripen. Get the habit of looking for these pictures and it will add much to your joy of living.

Something To Worry About

I refer to a field of mammoth clover that has gone down on a thin field. It will not have as much value for hay as if it had been cut before it lodged, but when the land is plowed in the late fall or early spring, much organic matter and food material will be added to the soil. "That's something to worry about" as one man expressed it. The hay crop will not all be cut, but the loss of this crop will be regained next year in the increased yield of corn, if we have a favorable season.

Over Ripe Timothy Hay

We just passed a field of over ripe timothy hay that was being put into the shock. "That's good horse hay, but it is not very good for sheep and dairy cattle," I said to Mrs. Berry, who was driving for me.

I am reminded now that timothy hay cut, just as the heads appear, has almost as much protein as red clover hay. It is much more palatable, too, than when it is ripe and the seeds are falling from the tops of the heads.

Clover Seed

Present indications are that there will be a good crop of clover seed this year in the corn belt. Southern Ohio will have its share; and we produce very good seed here.

Some of our readers might tell me how to avoid clover failures on our farm. The drought in May hurt the stand of the early spring seeding, and killed all of it last year.

Sweet clover, that was well distributed in the field, in the early spring, when a crop was plowed under last year has "closed the gap" as a soldier would express it, and prevented a legume crop failure. We'll get a good hay crop from the sweet clover seeding this year. It is making a very rapid growth since the wheat was cut. Sweet clover hay, that is cut the first year, has a feeding value for sheep and dairy cattle that is almost as high as alfalfa, but it is not quite as palatable. One man of my acquaintance said his beef calves wouldn't eat it, until they were "starved to it" as he expressed it, and then they made very good gains. This man always sows it on his bottom fields so he can get a crop of legume hay the same year he cuts his wheat. His rotation is corn, wheat and sweet clover. Some years he has good success in sowing sweet clover in the corn at the last cultivation, so he has three crops in two years, and a legume growing on the land, almost all the time. How is that for farming? "He's stepping on the gas" is the way a neighbor expressed it, and since he uses acid phosphate liberally on his bottom fields, he is building the soil all the time.

Baled Straw

You see a lot of it in the corn

belt this year. Some men bale only what they clean up around the stack; some bale all the straw as soon as they thresh, and put it into the barn for winter bedding; while those who use a combine, rake some of it in winrows, and have it baled in the field.

There is a machine on the market now that picks up the straw from the swath, after the combine, and bales it as it slowly moves across the field. Oscar Lyle of Hillsboro, R.F.D. 1, had a four acre field baled with one of these machines this year, and he was well pleased with the work it did.

I was on this farm a few hours after this baler had gone, and Mr. Lyle and his father and boys were picking up the bales in a low trailer, behind their farm tractor.

"It is low, so we don't have to lift the bales as high as if we were using a wagon" Mr. Lyle said.

They soon got on a load of 22 bales and hurried it into the barn, in high gear and came back for another load. We are surely moving rapidly in the development of practical farm machinery.

The Scent of New Mown Hay

What a wealth of pleasant memories just came to me when I caught the scent of new mown hay, as I passed a beautiful farm home. The hay making season was one of the happiest on the home farm, and I expect one of the most profitable, for Father always made much more hay than he needed, and had no trouble in selling the surplus, in the spring, at a good price. He liked to farm with a mow of good hay ahead, when the stock went out on pasture. Then he liked to have a crop of corn ahead, so if he had a "lean year" he could still grow some stock hogs, and raise some young stock. He sold most of the hogs as soon as they would bring $10.00. "Let the next man make as much clear profit as I did," he often said. "It can't be done" he would add, and he was right about it.

He bought and paid for three farms while we three boys and a sister were growing up.

Good Field of DeKalb Hybrid Corn

We just passed a very good field of DeKalb hybrid corn near South Bloomfield in Pickaway County. That's the drought resistant hybrid that is just coming into the corn belt. It was standing the drought well, too, while some fields in the community were "fired" half way to the ears. It will pay you to watch this hybrid and to try it in a small way on your farm. In the meantime, you can depend on such tested hybrids as U. S. 44 and Iowa 939, that yield well and stand up well, year after year.

making farm machinery, automobile parts, with mobiles, etc., into the tank production program.
Without drastic action, and without curtailing the "business as usual" program in other industries, no real speed up of the tank program will be possible.

GERMAN-BORN TANK EXPERT

Of all the men grouped around the Tank Committee conference table, the most interesting is a slender, boyish figure of about 40 who is manager of the Pressed Steel Car Company and president of the Armored Tank Corporation.
It happens that S. Bechhold was born in Germany, and fought in the German Army during the last war. Yet no one in the group now working overtime to build tanks for use against Hitler is more determined to speed production, more determined that Hitler shall not win this war.

FED UP WITH MILITARISM

Bechhold was sixteen when drafted into the German army in 1916, saw desultory service for which he had no enthusiasm whatever, and like thousands of other German boys, got thoroughly fed up with the German military system. So in 1922, having saved up enough money for transatlantic passage, he came to America.

Without drastic action, and without curtailing the "business as usual" program in other industries, no real speed up of the tank program will be possible.

GERMAN-BORN TANK EXPERT

Of all the men grouped around the Tank Committee conference table, the most interesting is a slender, boyish figure of about 40 who is manager of the Pressed Steel Car Company and president of the Armored Tank Corporation.
It happens that S. Bechhold was born in Germany, and fought in the German Army during the last war. Yet no one in the group now working overtime to build tanks for use against Hitler is more determined to speed production, more determined that Hitler shall not win this war.

FED UP WITH MILITARISM

Bechhold was sixteen when drafted into the German army in 1916, saw desultory service for which he had no enthusiasm whatever, and like thousands of other German boys, got thoroughly fed up with the German military system. So in 1922, having saved up enough money for transatlantic passage, he came to America.

TWO YOUTHS WALK AWAY FROM JAIL; SEARCH IS SPREAD

Sheriff, Aides Broadcast Description Of Two Fleeing Trustees

Sheriff's deputies were continuing a search Saturday for two youths who walked away Friday from the Pickaway County jail.

They were Forrest Schaffer, 27, 1299 Fulton Street, Columbus, and Harvey Winn, 19, Circleville Route 3. Both had been granted the freedom of the Court House yard in preference to the jail, and were assigned to various jobs around the County Jail buildings. Jail employees discovered they were missing early Friday afternoon and a quick search around the Court House grounds revealed both youths had disappeared. A notice of their escape was broadcast over the state highway patrol radio, but no apprehension has been made.

Schaffer was arrested by Railroad Detective G. C. Hunter on April 21 for angle-cocking a Norfolk and Western freight train. He was fined $300 and costs and had 98 days yet to serve in jail. Winn was fined $50 and costs for stealing gasoline. He was committed on June 21 and had 90 days yet to serve.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, August 9

CONFLICTING though not entirely adverse conditions prevail on this day according to the dominant astral testimonies. The inner urges and faculties will be found keyed to high levels of enterprise, adventure and innovation, with brilliant strokes of genius directed toward the inauguration of new and important undertakings. While the energies and abilities may justify this, danger lies in overdoing, over optimism and enthusiasm, to the extent of squandering the where-withal, financial and physical, to the hazard of worthy propositions. With extravagance, speculation and high chances eliminated there might be surprising success. Intimate associations are subject to similar exaggerations. Moderation and temperate behavior will be beneficial in all affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which their own powers of restraint, calmness, moderation and sagacity may prove the determining factor of their success and happiness. Under the urge of greatly stimulated forces and faculties in the direction of major enterprises, through new and audacious methods and perhaps radical innovations, there might be great accomplishments. But these may be jeopardized by a spirit of excess, extravagance and prodigality, manifested in lavish use of finances, energy, ideas, and emotions as well. Such perils also enter into the personal and intimate relations.

A child born on this day while it may be endowed with qualities of genius, generosity and magnanimity, yet may be a spendthrift of its substance — mental, emotional and financial. It may be easily victimized.

For Sunday, August 10

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a moderately propitious and encouraging one, with the affairs of the clergy, elders, workers and students under fortunate vibrations for success. Profound reflection as well as explorations into the higher realms of thought and speculation — scientific, philosophical or occult — would be profitable, also romantic yearnings may be indulged. But in all keep alert to intrigue, duplicity, curious or unwholesome indulgence or snares.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of moderate success and enjoyment, under the spur of elders, relatives, of property interests or sound business enterprise. This latter may respond to factors of the new and speculative, into which advanced ideas and original propositions may hold the weight of serious study and practical bases. But in all affairs, especially in private associations, be vigilant to snares and pitfalls. A child born on this day should be studious, practical and sound, although having unusual talents, ideas or ideals. All should combine for its success and happiness.

But Nazi Capital Declares Attackers Turned Back By Defenders Chairman George Declares Solons Considering Several Plans

"The air force dealt blows to enemy Panzer troops and infantry and attacked aircraft and airdromes. Twenty-one German aircraft were destroyed on August 7 while we lost 14.

"On the afternoon of August 7 our fighters shot down a German reconnaissance aircraft near Moscow. The crew was captured.

The Moscow radio continued its campaign to ridicule the recent German victory claims—broadcasting an English-language skit entitled "Much Ado About Nothing."

The broadcast parodied for the four special German victory communiques.

BERLIN, Aug. 9—Annihilation of encircled Soviet forces 60 miles southeast of the fallen Russian city of Smolensk was announced today by the German high command.

A special communique, issued direct from Chancellor Adolf Hitler's headquarters, said more than 38,000 prisoners were taken along with 359 guns and other war material.

Panzer Win Again To the south, on the Ukrainian Front, German Panzer forces were credited with another spectacular victory. A high command communique, proclaiming destruction of 25 Soviet divisions, said the Russians had lost more than 200,000 men killed and wounded in the new operations.

The statement claimed that the sixth and 12th and part of the 18th Red field armies had been knocked out of action. Meanwhile, authorized German military quarters hailed what they called "the end of the first week of decisive operations on the Eastern Front."

The week, they said, was marked by brilliant successes in the southern sector "while operations in other sectors also are progressing most satisfactorily."

The present tide of battle, they said, is comparable to the Artois conflict in the Battle of Flanders which ended in the Dunkirk disaster.

Refusing to deny or confirm that Russian planes had reached Berlin during the night, these authorized quarters said:

"We are not interested in London or Moscow reports."

Meanwhile, the official communique told of great numbers of prisoners and war material captured in new Ukrainian Front actions. At least 103,000 prisoners, the statement said, were captured along with 317 tanks, 858 field guns, 5,280 motor trucks and other arms and munitions.

100,000 ROMANIANS DIE IN WAR AGAINST RUSSIA

LONDON, Aug. 9—Reports in Lisbon, relayed to London by Reuters (British) news agency, said today that Romania has lost 100,000 troops on the Dniester Front.

"The losses," Reuters said, "caused a great depression throughout Romania, and outbursts against Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu broke out in the principal Romanian towns."

(Continued from Page One) personal income brackets might begin at $1,500 for married couples and $700 for single persons. The House bill kept the present rates of $2,000 exemption for married couples and $800 for single persons.

George said that the House recommendation of a $5 use tax for the operation of automobiles has its merits because it would reach approximately 30,000 people, but added that "I have not yet made up my mind on it."

George said also that the proposal is receiving "questionable" consideration from other members of the committee.

Testifying before the committee as it began hearings on the house-passed bill, Morgenthau renewed his fight for joint income tax returns, but George again threw cold water on the proposal, rejected by the House.

"I am still of the opinion that a majority of the committee will let the joint returns proposal lie where it is for a year or so," George said.

George said that the committee will resume hearings on the bill Monday when representatives of business, industry, and taxpayers will be heard.

Complying with Morgenthau's request for speedy consideration of the measure, George said that he will attempt to complete hearings in two weeks. It is estimated that the committee will take an additional week in executive session to write changes into the House measure.

VITAL QUESTIONS BEING TALKED BY FRENCH CABINET

Weygand — in consultation with Marshal Petain — has settled these problems.

Amid ever-increasing rumors and speculation that Germany is asking for bases in Africa, the cabinet meeting comes two days after the United States received a reply to its request for a clear definition of French colonial policy.

Although the exact contents of that reply were never made public, authorized Vichy officials said it reiterated France's determination to defend its colonial empire against all-comers.

The note was said, however, to have drawn sharp contrast between the "Syrian case" and the recent move in French Indo-China where the Vichy government granted Japan military bases on a "defensive deal" which brought sharp criticism from Washington.

Wide splits, however, are reported among the northern and middle western Democrats, with most of the west coast Democrats favoring the proposal since tightening of the foreign situation in the Pacific.
